SANĀTANA-DHARMA TEXT BOOKS

Compiled from material supplied by Dr Bhagavan Das

THE genesis of the Sanatana dharma Text Books is closely linked with the name of Dr Annie Besant and her co-workers Indian and European who founded the Central Hindu College at Benares. Dr Annie Besant arrived in India towards the close of 1893. In 1894-95, while she was staying at Benares some citizens (members of The Theosophical Society) placed before her the idea of starting a non official educational institution where the vital defect of the official educational system viz the lack of provision for moral and religious trainings could be made good. The first thought was to start a Theosophical College where youths of all religions could be taught the basic principles and eternal verities of that God Wisdom or Theosophy of all times and religions which formed the common source and heart of the many particular religions founded at various times. It soon became evident however that active co workers and helpers were available in the requisite numbers from the Hindu fold alone. Therefore it was ultimately decided to begin with a Central Hindu institution at Benares the object of which was to give side by side with intellectual instruction and physical training education in religion also on such lines as would help to unify the hundreds of sects into which Hinduism has been split up unhappily during the last ten or twelve centuries.

The C H College including a School was accordingly started in a rented house in the heart of the town of Benares on 7th July 1898 with three classes. Dr Arthur Richardson was the first Honorary Principal. The Memorandum of Association was registered on 7th March 1898. The seven signatories were Annie Besant Upendra Nath Basu Bertram Heightley Govinda Das Bhagavan Das Narendra Nath Mitter and Hirendra Nath Datta.

The first two objects of the Association as stated in the Memorandum were as follows.

(a) To establish educational institutions including boarding houses which shall combine moral and religious training in accordance with the Hindu Sastras with secular education

(b) To promote the imparting of similar religious and moral training in other educational institutions

Soon after the institution started functioning the need was felt as was inevitable for proper Text Books on the basis of which systematic instruction could be given in those principles of Hinduism ( Sanatana dharma ) which may be regarded as common to all its many sects

An Outline of Religious Instruction in accordance with the traditional and universally accepted subdivisions of the Vaidika dharma viz. Jnana kanda Bhakti kanda and Karma kanda was drawn up by the President and the Secretary and was circulated for six months for amendment and criticism among the members of the Board of Trustees the Managing Committee and a number of learned Hindus. The amendments suggested were carefully considered and duly incorporated by the Managing Committee. The Board reviewed the whole amended and finally passed the Scheme on Dec 30th 1900. It is printed on pp 57-58 of the second Annual Report of the C. H. C. for the year ending Sep 30th 1900. Its main points are reproduced verbatim in the Foreword and the Contents of Sanatana Dharma an Advanced Text Book of Hindu Religion and Ethics, and the text of the book is an amplification of the details

A small sub committee was appointed by the Board, to draw up the Text Book on the lines of the Scheme. The Indian members of the sub committee, as well as other learned scholars, supplied Samskrit texts, English translations, and other material. Dr Annie Besant drafted the running text of the book in English. This was done in two months, middle of May to middle of July, 1901, at S'ri nagar, Kashmir.

The third Annual Report of the C H C, for 1901, says (p 8) "After careful consideration and extensive discussion, the Board decided, in December last, on a Scheme for a Text Book of Hinduism, for the purposes of religious instruction. This Text Book has since been drawn up, and proof copies of it are now in circulation amongst the members of the Board of Trustees and the Managing Committee, and other learned Hindu friends possessing special knowledge on the subject. (A hundred proof-copies were thus circulated.) It is hoped that the Text-Book will be finally passed by the Board before very long and thereafter it is believed that not only this College, but many other institutions which wish, and whose circumstances allow them, to follow the example of this College, will find ready provided to their hands, an outline of the basic principles of religion which all Hindus of whatever special sect will be glad to see in the heads and the hearts of their children

The fourth Annual Report for 1902 (p 6) says

The religious instruction began to assume a little more definition in the year of report The Text Book has become a graduated series of three works
 (1) An Advanced Text Book of Sanātana dharma
 (2) An Elementary Text Book of Sanātana dharma
 and (3) Sanātana dharma Catechism

It was stated at the last anniversary that printed proofs of the first were then in circulation The suggestions for additions alterations omissions and improvements that were received were discussed and decided on at eight special meetings of the Board of Trustees and the book as thus finally shaped is now in the press This book is intended for College students After the Advanced Text Book was finally passed by the Board an abstract of it was drawn up as an Elementary Text Book for the use of the higher and middle school classes The third still smaller abstract in English is in the shape of questions and answers for the use of small boys This has been published and has been greatly appreciated and translations of it authorised by the Committee have already appeared in Hindi Urdu Gujarati Marathi Tamil, Bengali Telugu Malayalam and Sindhi

The fifth Annual Report, for 1903, (pp 13-16) says "In all the classes of the School and the College, the texts were taught with success. In addition, extra verses and passages were also taught to students and were studied by them with great interest. These extra studies were so regulated as to make the students familiar, in a general way, with the important authors of Samskrt literature. Verses specially suited for recitation were also dictated and explained to a select number of students. All the salient points of religion, given in the Ramayana, the Mahabharata, and the codes of Manu and others, were explained and illustrated. At the end of the morning lesson, some one student, or a band of them, chants some stotra previously learnt for the purpose, and, as different students do this, by turns, day after day, all of them get some practice in reciting Samskrt verse properly, half the significance of which is in the proper intonation of the metre. In consequence of these lessons in Hindu religion, all students whatever their alternative courses of secular study may be, manage to get some knowledge of Samskrt, as quotations in that language are largely used in the religious Text Books. The Elementary Text-Book was published in February, and the Advanced in July, 1903. Both have been well received by the public, and the Elementary has already been introduced into many schools and colleges in British as well as Indian State territories. One more vernacular edition of the Catechism was issued this year viz. 3 000 copies of a Canarese translation. Another in Urdu is now in hand. The general impression of the Committee is that these books have supplied a long felt and urgent want and they are inclined to agree with the opinion of some sympathisers that they represent in a sense almost the most important work of the Central Hindu College Association so far.

The eighth Annual Report for 1906 (p. 9) says

A second edition of the Advanced Text Book making 10 000 has been issued and a third of the Elementary making 15 000 is in the press : editions (of the latter) in Tamil, Bengali, Urdu and Kanarese have been issued. The Catechism runs to 104 000 (in the several languages and editions).

The tenth Annual Report for 1907 (p. 13) says

A Stotra manjarī was compiled mainly of ancient Sanskrit Hymns to the Universal Paramatma by the religious lecturers and published by the Board. A number of other books were written by Dr. Annie Besant and published by the Board to subserve the teaching of the Text Books e.g. The Story of the Great War (Mahābhārata), Srī Rāmacandra the Ideal King (Rāmāyana), Hindu Ideals, Children of the Motherland, Stories for Young Children, etc., All these had good circulation, and some had to be reprinted repeatedly ”

At the fourteenth anniversary, held on 7th and 8th Dec., 1912, H H Maha-rājā Prabhu Nārāyaṇa Simha of Benares presided. In the course of his presidential speech, he said “ Benares has been the seat of learning from time immemorial, and even in these degenerate days she has stood as the champion of Sanskrit learning in India. In order to benefit the Hindus at large, and to leaven the purely material education of the present day with some of the high ideals of Hindu religion and ethics, this noble and venerable lady [meaning Dr Besant] established this College in this holy city, so that it may bring forth students fully versed in worldly lore, but infused with those high ideals of religion and ethics without which man is little better than a beast. Education is barren without ethics, and ethics has no standing without religion. This College is, as I have said, the outcome of the disinterested exertions of this pious lady, Mrs. Besant to whom the Hindu public ought to ever remain indebted for the boon she has conferred upon them by this means. This College ought therefore to be our first care, and its interests ought to be zealously guarded, more especially as it is going to be the nucleus of the Hindu University. The lines on which religious education has been carried on here have been admirable. It has steered clear of all sectarian shoals and eddies having the pure Sanatana dharma as its goal. Such was the testimony given to the great value of the Religious instruction given in these Text Books.

On that same occasion Dr Annie Besant spoke for the last time as President of the Central Hindu College for the institution was transferred by the Board, to the charge of the Hindu University Society on 27th Nov. 1914. She said (p 7 of the Report for 1912) 'An idea was formed by three or four leading men of Benares that there should be built up in this sacred land of Kasi an institution where religion must be taught. We had not then one inch of ground to stand upon. The general feeling was against religious education. It was said to be foolish and utopian. The students were overworked and it was considered to be cruel to overburden them with an additional subject. It was said that there were so many divisions in Hinduism that it would cause disputes among the children. No one had tried so far to establish an institution over which should spread the spirit of Hindu religion. When everything was discouraging when none had a good word to say to us we placed the thing before His Highness the Maha raja of Benares and asked him if he would help us with land on which to erect. He said he was ready and asked us to begin. He told us to come to him as soon as we were ready and ask him what we wanted. A few months later a second deputation went to him and the College you see before you was the result. As long as there exists the name of the Central Hindu College and as long as the Hindu University shall last so long shall His Highness name be remembered as the first of India's Princes to uplift the Hindu people and to train the boys in the Motherland's religion. The College has since then grown year after year and religious education is no longer confined to the Central Hindu College. In far Kashmir at Srinagar was founded a College for religious education by the Central Hindu College of Benares at the request of the Maharaja of Kashmir. From north Kashmir to south Mysore religious education has spread. Not only in Kashmir and Mysore but in the dominions of H. H. the Nizam of Hyderabad religious education is given to Hindu boys from the same Text Books. In Rajputana in the Rajkumar College every Hindu prince is trained in the Sanatana dharma Text Books issued by the C. H. College. So vast a tree has grown from so small a seed. There is nothing irrational as to say that a nation can live or men can grow without religious education. I appeal to history when I say that the great public schools and colleges of England were all founded by religious men.

Incidentally it may be interesting to note the following contained in the same Report (p. 9) : One of the pleasantest features of the prize giving was that the prize to the most helpful student awarded on the vote of the students themselves went to a Mussalman student—a fairly good proof that education in Hinduism does not mean bigotry. It may be noted that though the large majority of students of the C. H. College were Hindus naturally yet students of other faiths were never excluded and were left at liberty to attend or not as they liked the lectures on Sanatana dharma.

Speaking again at the first anniversary meeting held for the first time under the auspices of the Hindu University Society Dr. Besant stated as follows :

We put in the very forefront Religious Education. I must emphasise this basic idea of the education that we should impart. The Hindu University only widens the sphere and fields of activity of the C. H. College without in any way affecting its ground work. The object of the C. H. College has been and the object of the Hindu University will be to combine all that is best in the cultures of the East and of the West. And it goes without saying that the essence of the culture in the East is religion or the observance of our ancient Dharma.

Later in that same year (1915) when the Benares Hindu University Act was being discussed in the Central Legislature, a member, in referring to the clauses relating to religious instruction, jestingly asked the question, "What is Hinduism, what Hinduism are you going to teach?", and the spokesman for the Act replied conclusively, 'There is no room for question as to what Hinduism we are going to teach, we have been teaching Hinduism through these Text Books'

From the figures given in the Report for 1906, it will be seen that, by that time i.e., within less than four years of first publication, about 130,000 copies, altogether, of the three Text-Books, in the original English, the several translations, and reprints, had gone into circulation throughout the country.

It seems desirable to mention here that a work similar to that done for Śaṅkara dharma through these Text Books was planned by Dr Besant to be done for all the great living religions through The Universal Text Book of Religion and Morals, compiled by her on the same lines as these Text Books, showing by means of translated parallel passages, how the basic ideas were common to all religions. The earnest and thoughtful student may well read this book by Dr Besant and also another book very recently published viz. The Essential Unity of All Religions by her erudite collaborator Dr Bhagavan Das. In this latter book nearly

1 200 parallel passages are brought together from the sacred writings of the eleven great living religions over 1 000 of these are given in the original (in roman characters) as well as in translation and no copyright has been reserved since there is none in the Scriptures The arrangement of the topics is generally similar to that of these Text Books but the method of elucidation and interweaving of the parallel texts is more detailed These books will be found to supplement the Sanatana dharma Text Books and help to bring home to the student how the essentials of Sanatana dharma permeate the other religions also and how by such understanding peace and good will may be established among followers of different creeds and faiths in this land of many creeds and faiths

The above narrative proves how the great value of the religious education given through these Text Books of Sanatana dharma was recognised and deeply appreciated by all ranks and by varied schools of thought among the Hindus Somehow this line of work was not kept up after 1914 1915 the books went out of print and have not been available to the public for fifteen or twenty years now The immediately urgent tasks concerned with the building up of the Benares Hindu University absorbed all the attention and energies of its chief founder the venerable Pandit Madan Mohan

Mālavīva jī. For a few years past, however, the idea of reprinting these Text Books had been engaging his thoughts, but was not implemented for various reasons. Meantime, there was a growing demand for their re-publication. With a view to meet this demand, the Theosophical Publishing House, Adyar opened correspondence with the authorities of the Benares Hindu University. Two years ago, the question was also discussed personally by the representatives of the T. P. H. It was understood that the University contemplated re-publication of the Text-books only after effecting some revision, but, as this would take time, the T. P. H. decided to undertake their re-publication without further delay and make them readily available to the public who have been eagerly expecting their re-issue for some years past. The Texts are now reprinted exactly as they were printed and published in 1914-15 with the approval and imprimatur of the Trustees of the Central Hindu College, Benares, under the Presidency of Dr. Besant except for the addition of a Chapter on Purusarthas from the pen of that eminent scholar Dr. Bhagavan Das of Benares.

FOREWORD

THE Board of Trustees of the Central Hindu College has laid down the following principles on which religious and moral teaching is to be given in all institutions under its control

The object of the Central Hindu College being to combine Hindu religious and ethical training with the western education suited to the needs of the time it is necessary that this religious and ethical training shall be of a wide liberal and unsectarian character while at the same time it shall be definitely and distinctively Hindu. It must be inclusive enough to unite the most divergent forms of Hindu thought but exclusive enough to leave outside it forms of thought which are non Hindu. It must avoid all doctrines which are the subject of controversy between schools recognised as orthodox. It must not enter into any of the social and political questions of the day but it must lay a solid foundation of religion and ethics on which the student may build in his manhood the more special principles suited to his intellectual and emotional temperament. It must be directed to the building up of a character —pious, dutiful, strong, self-reliant, upright, righteous, gentle and well-balanced—a character which will be that of a good man and a good citizen, the fundamental principles of religion, governing the general view of life and of life's obligations, are alone sufficient to form such a character. That which unites Hindus in a common faith must be clearly and simply taught. All that divides them must be ignored. Lastly, care must be taken to cultivate a wide spirit of tolerance, which not only respects the differences of thought and practice among Hindus, but which also respects the differences of religion among non-Hindus regarding all faiths with reverence, as roads whereby men approach the Supreme.

Therefore

1. The religious and ethical instruction must be such as all Hindus can accept.
2. It must include the special teachings which mark out Hinduism from other religions.
3. It must not include the distinctive views of any special school or sect.

This elementary Text Book, written in accordance with this scheme, is intended for the use of Hindu boys in the middle and upper sections of the High Schools of India, and is designed to give them a general but correct idea of their national religion, such as may be filled in by fuller study in College and in later life, but will not need to be changed in any essential respect.

It contains the fundamental ideas and doctrines which are generally received as orthodox but does not enter into the details as to which sectarian divisions have arisen. It is believed that while a sectarian parent or teacher will probably make additions to it, he will not find in it anything which he will wish positively to repudiate.

While the book may be placed in the hands of the boys for their own study, it is intended to be simplified by the oral explanations of the teacher and each chapter serves as an outline on which one or more lessons may be based.

The sloka is given at the end of the chapters should be committed to memory by the boys. They will thus acquire a useful store of sacred authorities on their religion.

The name of this series Sanatana dharma was chosen after full discussion as best representing the idea of the fundamental truths presented. It has become somewhat of a sectarian name in some parts of India but it is here taken only as meaning the eternal religion.

That this book may prove useful in laying a firm foundation of right thinking in the minds of Hindu youths and may help in shaping them into pious, moral, loyal and useful citizens of their Motherland and of the Empire, is the prayer with which its compilers send it forth to the world.

INTRODUCTION

SANATANA DHARMA means the Eternal Religion, the Ancient Law, and it is based on the Vedas, sacred books given to men many long ages ago. This Religion has also been called the Aryan Religion, because it is the Religion that was given to the first nation of the Aryan race. Ārya means noble, and the name was given to a great race, much finer in character and appearance than the races which went before it in the world's history. The first families of these people settled in the northern part of the land now called India, and that part in which they first settled was named Āryavarta, because these Aryans lived in it. (The land) from the eastern ocean to the western ocean, between the two mountains (Himalat and Vindhya), the wise call Āryavarta."

In later days the Religion was called the Hindu Religion, and this is the name by which it is now usually known. It is the oldest of living Religions, and no other Religion has produced so many great men—great teachers, great writers, great sages, great saints, great kings, great warriors, great statesmen, great benefactors, great patriots. The more you know of it, the more you will honour and love it, and the more thankful you will be that you were born into it. But unless you grow up worthy of it, this great and holy Religion will do you no good.

THE BASIS OF SANATANA DHARMA

The Ancient Religion is based on one strong foundation on which are erected the walls of its structure.

The foundation is called yūti Truth, that which has been heard. The walls are called smṛti Smriti, that which has been remembered.

The Śruti has been given through very wise men, who heard it and received it from Devas, these sacred teachings were not written down till comparatively modern times, but were learnt by heart and constantly repeated.

The teacher sang them to his pupils and the pupils sang them after him a few words at a time, over and over again till they knew them thoroughly. Boys still learn the Śruti in the same way as their forefathers learnt it in very ancient days and you may hear them chanting it in any Vaidika Patha sala at the present time.

The Śruti consists of the चतुर्वेदाः Catur vedah the Four Veda. Veda means knowledge that which is known and the knowledge which is the foundation of Religion is given to man in the Four Vedas. They are named ऋग्वेद R̥g veda, यजुर्वेद Yajur veda, सामवेद Sām veda and अथर्ववेद Atharva veda.

Each Veda is divided into three parts

- 1 मन्त्र Mantrah or मंहिता Samhita collection
- 2 ब्राह्मणम् Brahmanam
- 3 उपनिषद् Upaniṣad

The Mantra portion consists of Mantras or sentences in which the order of sounds has a particular power produces certain effects. These are in the form of hymns to the Devas—whose relations to men we shall study presently—and when they are properly chanted by properly instructed persons certain results follow. They are used in religious ceremonies and the value of the ceremony depends chiefly upon their proper repetition.

The Brahmana portion of the Veda consists of directions about ritual and explains how to perform the ceremonies in which were used the Mantras.

given in the first part and further, stories connected with them

The Upanisad portion consists of deep philosophical teachings on the nature of Brahman on the supreme and the separated Self on man and the universe on bondage and liberation. It is the foundation of all philosophy and when you are men you may study it and delight in it. Only highly educated men can study it it is too difficult for others.

There was a fourth part of the Veda in the ancient days sometimes called the उपवेद Upan vedah or तन्त्रम् Tantram; this consisted of science and of practical instructions based on the science but very little of the true ancient Tantra remains as the Rsis took them away as unsuitable for time in which people were less spiritual. Some Tantrika forms of ritual are however used in worship along with or instead of the current Vaidika forms. The books now extant under the name of Tantras are generally not regarded as part of the Veda.

That which is found in the Śruti is of supreme authority and is accepted by every faithful follower of the Sayatana dharma as final. All the sects all the philosophical systems appeal to the Śruti as the final authority determining every dispute.

The Smṛti or Dharma sastra is founded on and stands next in authority to the Śruti and consists of four great works written by Sages the chief contents of which are laws and regulations for the carrying on of individual family social and national life. Hindu Society is founded on and governed by these laws. They are

- 1 मनुस्मृति or मानवधर्मशास्त्रम् Manu smṛti or Manava dharma śāstram    The Institutes of Manu
- 2 याज्ञवल्क्यस्मृति Yajña valkya smṛti
- 3 शङ्खस्मृति Śaṅkha Likhita smṛti
- 4 पराशरस्मृति Parasara smṛti

The first of these is the chief compendium of Āryan law. Manu being the great Law-giver of the race. Hindu chronology divides the history of a world into seven great periods or cycles of time each of which is begun and is ended by a Manu and is therefore called a Manvantara. Manvantara between (two) Manus.

Six other Manus very great minded and of great splendour belonging to the race of this Manu the descendant of Svayambhu have each produced beings. As there are two Manus for each Manvantara that shows that we are in the fourth Manvantara under the rule of the seventh Manu who is the next sloka tells us the son of Vivasvat. Some of his laws are handed down in the Manu smṛti.

The Yajña valkya smṛti follows the same general line as the Manu smṛti and is next in importance to it. The other two are not now much studied or referred to except in some parts of Southern India.

While the Śruti and the Smṛti are the foundation and the walls of the Sinatana dharma, there are two other important supports like buttresses, the पुराणानि Purāṇāni Puranas and the इतिहास Iti-hāsa History.

The Puranas consist of histories and stories and allegories composed for the use of the less learned part of the nation especially for those who could not study the Vedas. They are very interesting to read and are full of information of all kinds. Some of the allegories are difficult to understand, and require the help of a teacher.

The Iti-hāsa comprises two great poems.

1. The रामायणम् Ramayanaṁ the history of Śaṁkha Śakra the son of King Daśaratha and of His wife Sita and of His brothers and of His interesting and delightful story as you all know.

2. The महाभारतम् Mahābhārataṁ the history of the Kurus a royal family of Northern India, which split into two parties the Kurus and the Pāṇḍavas between whom a great war broke out. It contains an immense number of beautiful stories, noble moral teachings and useful lessons of all kinds.

These two books the Ramayana and the Mahābhārata tell us most of what we know about ancient India, about her people and customs and her ways of living, and her arts and her manufactures. If you read these you will learn how great India once was and you will also learn how you must behave to make her great once more.

THE SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY OF SAVATANA DHARMA

While the Ś'ruti and the Smṛti, the Purāṇas and the Itihāsa make the edifice of Hindu Religion, we find that the Religion itself has given rise to a splendid literature of Science and Philosophy.

The Science was divided into the षड्भानि Śaḍ angaḥ, the Six Angas, literally Limbs, and these six Limbs or Branches comprised what would now be called secular knowledge. In the old days religious and secular knowledge were not divided.

They included Grammar, Philology, Astrology, Poetry, together with sixty-four sciences and arts, and the method by which study should be carried on, so that any one who mastered the six angas was a man of varied and deep learning.

The Philosophy also had six divisions, the षड्दर्शनानि Śaḍ darsanāni, the Six Darśanas, or ways of seeing things usually called the Six Systems. They all have one object—the putting an end to pain by enabling the aspirated human selves to reunite with the supreme Self—and they all have one method—the development of ज्ञान Jñānam Wisdom. The ways employed are different to suit the different mental constitutions of men so that they are like six different roads all leading to one town.

As to what is contained in the Six Systems of philosophy it will be enough for boys to know this.

The Nyaya and the Vaiśeṣika arrange all the things of the world into a certain number of kinds, then point out that a man knows all things by means of his senses or by inference and analogy, or by testimony of other (wise and experienced) men, and then they explain how God has made all this material world out of atoms and molecules; finally they show how the highest and most useful knowledge is the knowledge of God who is also the inmost Spirit of man and how this knowledge is obtained in various ways.

The Sāṃkhya explains in more detail and in new ways the nature of पुरुष Puruṣa Spirit and of प्रकृति Prakṛti Matter and relation of each to the other.

The Yoga says that as there are a generally known five senses and five organs of action so there are other subtler senses and organs and explains more fully how they may be developed by men who are seeking to know God who is their own true inmost Spirit

The Mīmāṃsā explains what karma is i.e. action both religious and worldly and what are its consequences causes and effects and how it binds man to this world or to another

The Vedānta finally tells fully what is the exact and true nature of God or Ātman and shows that Jīva of man is in essence the same as this inmost God and explains how man may live so that karma shall not bind him and finally by understanding what the Māyā śakti of God is by which all this world comes forth and appears and disappears how he may (after practice of Yoga) merge himself into and become one with God and so gain Mokṣa

the meaning clear God in His own Nature. Sometimes the Hindu speaks of the ALL as Nirguna Brahman the Brahman without attributes or the unconditioned Brahman. This is to distinguish the unmanifested state of Brahman the ALL from the manifested state in which Brahman is called the Sa guna Brahman the Brahman with attribute or the conditioned Brahman the Supreme Isvara with His universe.

The two are called the two states of Brahman. The subject is very difficult and it is enough for a boy to understand that the Sa guna Brahman is Brahman revealed—not a second but Brahman shining forth as THE ONE the Great Lord of Being Thought and Bliss. He is the self-existent One the Root and Cause of all being. He is also sometimes called Puruottama the Supreme Spirit THE SELF. With Himself a Spirit He reveals the other side of the ALL which is named Mula prakriti the Root of Matter Prakriti. Matter is that which takes form and so can give bodies of all sorts and shapes and kinds. All that we can touch taste smell see and hear is Matter and a great deal more besides which our five senses are not yet developed enough to perceive. The solid liquids and gases of the chemist are made of Matter all the things round us stone tree animal men.

Matter are said to be the opposites one of the other Spirit is called the knower the one that know while Matter is called the object of knowledge that which is known

Students should try to understand these differences and must never confuse Spirit and Matter they are opposites the first pair of opposites out of which a universe is built up

Just as Spirit has three qualities सत् चित् आनन्दम् Sat Cit Anandam—Being Thought Power and Bliss so has Matter three qualities तम रज मत्सम् Tamah Rajah Sattvam—Inertia Mobility Rhythm Inertia gives resistance and stability to Matter Mobility keeps Matter active moving about Rhythm makes the movements regular You may say

A stone does not move of itself But science tells you that every particle in that stone—particles too small for you to see—is moving rapidly and regularly to and fro is vibrating to use the scientific term

The शक्ति Saktih or the Divine Power of Isvara which makes Matter begin to take form is called माया Maya and sometimes देवा प्रकृति Daivi prakrtih the Divine Prakrti Sri Krsna speaks of My Divine Prakrti as My other Prakrti the higher the life element by which the universe is upheld

The student may think of the great pair of opposites Isvara and Mula prakrti standing as it were face to face and the Divine Power of Isvara shining out on Mulā prākṛti and making the qualities called guṇaḥ act on each other so that many forms begin to appear. This Divine power is Māyā and so Isvara is called the Lord of Māyā.

Even young students must try to remember the names and what they mean for they cannot otherwise understand the teaching of the Bhagavad Gītā which every Hindu boy must try to understand. It may be well to say that the word Prākṛti is generally used instead of Mulā prākṛti the prefix Mulā Root being usually left out.

CHAPTER II

THE MANY

WHEN Iṣvara shines out on Prakṛti and makes it fall into shapes the first Forms that appear are those of the त्रिमूर्ति Tri murti the three Aspects of Iṣvara manifested to cause a ब्रह्माण्डम् Brahmandam, literally an Egg of Brahma a universe or orderly system of worlds. The Aspect of Iṣvara in which He creates the worlds is named Brahma. Brahma is the Creator. The aspect of Iṣvara in which He preserves takes care of and maintains the worlds is named Viṣṇu. Viṣṇu is the Pre-serv-er. The aspect of Iṣvara in which He dissolves the worlds when they are worn out and of no further use is named Śiva or Mahadeva. Śiva is the Dissolver of the worlds. These are the first manifestations of Iṣvara. His Supreme Forms. His three Aspects or Faces. The ONE the Sa guna Brahman or the Supreme Iṣvara appears as Three.

Brahma the Creator shapes matter into seven तत्त्वानि Tattvāni Elements as they have been called. Different names are given to the first two we may use the names Mahad Buddha Pure Reason, and Ahim kara, Egoism, the principle of separation, breaking up matter into tiny particles, called atoms. Then come the remaining five Tattvas Akasa, Ether Vayu Air Agni Fire Ap Water Prthivi, Earth. This is called the creation of the भूतानि Bhutani Elements, and out of these all things are partly made. There is more of Tamo guna than of Rajo guna and of Sattva guna showing itself in these elements and so the things composed chiefly of them are dull and inert. the inner life, the Jiva, cannot show its powers for the coat of matter is so thick and heavy.

Next after the Elements the ten Indriyas are created. these were at first only ideas in the mind of Brahman and later were clothed in the elements. they are the five centres of the senses. smell taste, sight, touch, hearing the organs of which are the nose, tongue, eyes, skin and ears and the five centres of action the organs of which are hands, feet and those of speech, generation and excretion. There is more of Rajo guna than of Tamo guna and of Sattva guna shewing itself in these Indriyas, so they are very active and the inner life the Jiva can show more of its powers in them.

The we term chetana is the word in a different sense but the meaning is the one we are concerned with.

After the Indriya s Brahma created in His mind the Deva s who are connected with the senses, and also Manah the mind which is sometimes called the sixth Indriya, when the first five are spoken of, and the eleventh when the ten are taken, because it draws into itself and arranges and thinks over all the sensations collected by the Indriya s from the outer world. There is more of Sattva guna than of Tamo guna and of Rajo guna showing itself in the e Deities and Manah.

The student must remember that these guna s are never separated, but one guna may be more dominant than another in any particular being. When Tamo guna dominates the being is called tama ik when Rajo guna dominates the being is called raja s ik when Sattva guna dominates the being is called sattva ik. All things may be divided under the e three heads of sattva ik raja s ik, and tama s ik.

Brahma next created in His mind the hosts of Deva s who carry out administer the laws of Isvara, and see to the proper management of all the world. Isvara is the King the One Lord and the Deva s are His ministers like the ministers and officials of an earthly king. The students must never confuse the Deva s with the supreme Isvara with Brahman. They are His higher officials for the

Brahmānda as we men are His lower officials for this one particular world

The Deva's sometimes called Suras see that each man gets what he has earned by his Karma. They give success and failure in worldly things according to what a man deserves they help men in many ways when men try to serve them and much of the bad weather and sickness and famine and other national troubles come from men entirely neglecting the duties they owe to the Deva's. The Deva's are a vast multitude divided under their five Rulers Indra Vayu Agni Varuna and Kubera. Indra has to do with the ether Vayu with the air Agni with the fire Varuna with the water Kubera with the earth. The Deva's under each have different names as we see in the Purāṇas and the Itihāsa. The student may have read for instance how Bhīma fought with the Yaksas who were the servants of Kubera.

In these Deva's the Rajasguna dominates. Manu says that their nature is action.

The Asuras the enemies of the Deva's embody the resistance or inertia of matter and in them Tamo guna is predominant.

Brahmā then created in His mind mineral plants animals and men thus completing the picture of the worlds wherein the unfolding of the powers of the Jiva—what is now called Evolution—was to take place. In Samskrt this world evolution or world process is called ससर (Samsarah) and it is compared to a wheel constantly turning on which all Jiva's are bound.

Thus Brahma completed His share of the great task of a universe but the forms needed to be clothed in physical matter to be made active beings this was the work of Vishnu the All pervader the Maintainer and Preserver of the worlds. He breathed His life into all the e forms and as a Purana says, became Prana in all forms and gave them consciousness. Then all the Brahmanda became full of life and consciousness. But even this was not enough when man came upon the scene. Two Aspects of Isvara had given Their Life but the third Aspect remained the One who dissolves forms and thus liberates the Jiva's calling them to union and bliss. The life of Maha deva must be poured out to complete the triple Jiva of man that he might be the perfect reflexion of the triple Isvara. This was done and the human Jiva began his long evolution having already passed through evolved through the mineral vegetable and animal kingdoms in previous kalpa's. A very beautiful description of the evolution through plants and animals to men until 'in man Ātman is manifest and 'by the mortal he desires the immortal may be read by

Manu's work With the coming of the Fish began the great evolution of animal life in the world

2 KURMA the Tortoise —As the tortoise Vishnu, supported the whirling mountain, which churned the great sea of matter, that it might give forth the necessary forms The Tortoise is the type of the next great step in evolution

3 VARAHA, the Boar —The earth was sunk below the waters, and Vishnu raised it up giving in the Boar the type of the great mammalian kingdom which was to flourish on the dry land

Modern Science recognises these three great stages of evolution each marked in Hinduism by an Avatara

4 NARASIMHA the Man Lion —This was the Avatara that came to free the earth from the tyranny of the Daitvas Into this race a child, Prahlada, was born, who from earliest childhood was devoted to Vishnu, despite the threats and the cruelties of his Daitva father Over and over again the father tried to slay the son but ever Vishnu intervened to save him at last He burst from a pillar in the form of a Man Lion and slew the Daitva King

5 VAMANA, the Dwarf —At last He came as man, to aid the evolution of the human race, and gained from Bali the right to all He could cover in three steps, one step covered the earth and thus He won for man the field of his evolution of a mighty faith followed by millions of the human race. In him Visnu teaches vast multitudes of non-Aryan peoples.

10 KALKI—the Avatara who shall close the Kali yuga and whose coming is yet in the future. When He comes the Satva yuga will return to earth ■ new cycle will begin.

The development and perfection of the human type is indicated by these Avatara s it can become nothing else because its nature is the same as that of the parent. And so with the Jiva like a seed he is dropped into matter by Isvara he slowly grows putting out his hidden powers until he becomes Isvara he can become nothing else because his nature is the same as that of his Parent Isvara.

Isvara is said to be wise and powerful Jiva to be unwise and powerless but the Jiva grows into wisdom and power and that growth is what is called Evolution.

We have seen that the Jiva begins in the mineral kingdom his long pilgrimage through the physical world. At that stage he is unconscious of the outer world. His attention is called to it its existence is forced on him by violent shocks and blows from outside earthquakes volcanoes land slips the rolling of the furious surf the sea and many other violent agencies arouse the Jiva's attention to the fact that he is not alone that there is something outside him. If the student reads the accounts of the very early periods of the earth's history he will be struck by the number of big catastrophes all these were necessary to awaken the Jivas. After a very very long time the Jivas were sufficiently awake to be fit for softer and more flexible bodies than mineral, and they went on into plants while others coming his powers in the outer world, and the Deva s help him by giving him materials that are suited to the organ he wants to build. When he is trying to see, Agni gives him some of his own fiery matter which vibrates when touched by rays of light. When he wants to taste Varuna gives him some of his own watery matter which makes tasting possible. And so on. In this way he makes his bodies, and when he has shaped one as much as he can, and it is of no further use to him he throws it away and makes another. He evolves faster and faster as he goes on because his powers as they work more freely, can bring about results much more quickly than in the earlier stages.

This is the general process of evolution and the succession has been told about as though it were unbroken, so that the student may grasp the main idea. But, in nature, while the general stream is onwards there are many little twists and turnings and runnings up into bye ways. A Jiva may slip backward for a time stay a while in a stage that he has long left behind him. There is something he has not quite learned, some power he has not quite evolved, and he falls by this into a lower stage again as a boy at school, if he were idle, might be put back into a lower class. A Jiva which has reached the human stage may be attached to an animal or to a plant, or, if he be very tamasic, even

Even here on earth they have conquered the universe whose mind remains balanced. Brahman is incorruptible and balanced therefore they are established in Brahman.

One should neither rejoice in obtaining what is pleasant nor sorrow in obtaining what is unpleasant. With heart on firm unperturbed, the Brahman knower (is) established in Brahman.

He whose self is unattached to external contacts and findeth joy in the Self, having the self harmonised with Brahman by yoga enjoyeth happiness exempt from decay.

CHAPTER IV

KARMA

KARMA is a Sanskrit word which means action but it is generally used to mean a certain definite connection between what is being done now and what will happen in the future. Things do not happen by accident by chance in a disorderly way. They happen in regular succession they follow each other in a regular order.

If a seed is planted in the ground it sends up a little stem and leaves grow on the stem and the flowers come and then fruits and in the fruits are seeds again. And one of these seeds planted will produce a stem and leaves and flowers and fruits and seeds. The same sort of seed produces the same kind of plants. Rice produces rice plants, barley produces barley, wheat produces wheat, thistle produces thistle; cactus produces cactus. If a man sows thistles he must not expect a crop of sweet grapes. If he plants prickly cactus he must not expect to gather juicy apples. This is karma and a man knowing it sows the seed of the thing he wants to reap. This is the first thing to remember

Now an action is not quite so simple a thing as it looks. If I ask a person, "Why do you walk into the town?" he will say, "I wanted a pair of shoes and I thought I could get them there" or

I wanted to see a friend and I thought he was in the town and so on in many ways but always

I wanted and I thought therefore I acted. These three are always found together.

Now a want is what is called a desire—we desire to get something—that is the first stage; then we think how to get it—that is the second stage; then we act so as to get it—that is the third stage. This is the regular order: every action has a thought behind it and every thought has a desire behind it.

These three things—action, thought, desire—are the three threads that are twisted into the cord of karma. Our actions make the people round us happy or unhappy; if we make them happy, we have sown happiness like a seed and it grows up into happiness for ourselves; if we make them unhappy, we have sown unhappiness like a seed and it grows up into unhappiness for ourselves. If we do cruel things, we sow cruelty like a seed and it grows up into cruelty to ourselves. If we do kind things, we sow kindness like a seed and it grows up into kindness to ourselves. Whatever we sow by our actions comes back to us. This is karma.

But action has thought behind it. Now thought makes what is called our character, the nature and kind of mind that we have. As we think about a thing a great deal, our mind becomes like that thing. If we think kindly, we become kind; if we think cruelly, we become cruel; if we think deceitfully, we become deceitful; if we think honestly, we become honest. In this way our character is made by our thoughts and when we are born again, we shall be born with the character that is being made by our thoughts now. As we act according to our nature, or character—as a kind person acts kindly, or a cruel person acts cruelly—it is easy to see that actions in our next life will depend on the thoughts of our present life. This is karma.

But thought has desire behind it. Now desire brings us the object we wish for. As a magnet attracts soft iron, so does desire attract objects. If we desire money, we shall have the opportunity of becoming rich in another life. If we desire learning, we shall have the opportunity of becoming learned in another life. If we desire love, we shall have the opportunity of becoming loved. If we desire power, we shall have the opportunity of becoming powerful. This is karma.

The student should think over this again and again till he thoroughly understands it. Only when he understands this can he go on to the more difficult problems of karma. Karma may be summed up in a sentence. A man reaps as he sows.

But the student may ask, "If my actions now are the outcome of my past thoughts, and if my past thoughts are the outcome of my past desires, am I not helplessly bound? I must act as I have thought. I must think as I have desired. That is true, but to a certain extent only, for we are changing constantly as we gain new experiences, and the Jiva thus gains more knowledge, and by the help of that changes his desires. In other words while we have actually desired, thought and acted in a certain way in the past the possibility of desiring of thinking otherwise has also been present throughout that past, and this possibility may be turned, at any time into actuality as soon as we realise, by means of new experiences the evil consequences of acting as we have actually done in the past.

Suppose a man finds that he has acted cruelly, he learns that his cruel action was caused by his cruel thoughts in the past, and that those cruel thoughts grew out of desire to get an object which could only be obtained by cruelty. He sees that his cruel actions make people miserable, that these people hate and fear him, and thus make him lonely and unhappy. He thinks over all this, and he resolves to change, but the pressure of his past thoughts and desires is very difficult to resist. He goes to the root of the trouble—the desire for the things that he cannot get without cruelty, and he—who is the Jiva—says to himself: “I will not let myself desire those things, and whenever I begin to wish for them I will remember that the desire breeds misery. He uses thought to check desire instead of letting desire control thought. Then instead of desires carrying him away, as if they were runaway horses, he gradually uses thought as a bridle, and keeps his desires in check. He will only allow them to run after objects that bring happiness when they are obtained.

Young Jivas let their desires run away with them, and so bring much unhappiness on themselves, older Jivas grow wiser and when the desire runs out to an object the possession of which would, as he has found in the past cause unhappiness he remembers that past unhappiness and by his thought pulls the desire back.

The student then who would make happiness for others and for himself must look well after his desires, must find out by observation and study which objects in the long run bring happiness and which bring unhappiness and must then try, with all his strength to desire only those things the outcome of which is happiness.

It is very important to realise that escape from the bonds of birth and death is not gained by any special mode of life, but that, as S'ri Kṛṣṇa says "He who, established in unity, worshippeth Me, abiding in all beings, that yogin liveth in Me, whatever his mode of living"<sup>1</sup> Janaka, the Kṣatriya King and Tula dhara the Vaisya merchant, equally reached liberation, and that not by fleeing to the forest, but by the absence of desire for worldly things.

Janaka was King in Mithilā over the Videha s and, having attained to tranquility of mind, he sang this song "Unlimited is my wealth, and yet I have naught If the whole of Mithilā be burned up with fire, yet for me there will be nothing lost " And so he told Mandavya having repeated this, that whatever possessions a man might have were but a source of trouble, and that the gratification of desire, here or in heaven, could not afford the sixteenth part of the happiness which comes from the disappearance of desire As the horns of a cow grow with the cow, so does the desire for wealth grow with its possession Wealth should be used for the good that can be done with it, but desire is sorrow Looking on all creatures as on himself, a wise man gains freedom from all anxiety<sup>2</sup> By the teaching of the sage Vajra vākya King Jinaka attained liberation for it enabled him to attain to that Brahman which is auspicious and immortal and which transcends all sorrow. And having thus learned he became in his turn a teacher to whom even Viśva sent his son Śuka to learn the religion of emancipation.

Jāyā made great tīpas and became filled with pride and one day he thought within himself 'who in this wide sea and spacious earth is like to me?' Then cried a voice 'See not such words. Even Tulā dhāra, busy in buying and selling should not thus speak, and to him thou art not equal.' Then Jāyā wondered much that a mere merchant should be put above himself a Brāhmana and an ascetic and he set forth to find Tulā dhāra and thus solve the riddle. Leaving himself he reached the city of Vārāṇasī and there found Tulā dhāra a mere shopkeeper selling to whomsoever came all kinds of goods. Tulā dhāra stood up greeting the Brāhmana who was sitting and to him Tulā dhāra related the story of the great penance that had inflated him with pride. 'Angry thou hast come to me. O Brāhmana what service can I render thee?' Much amazed was Jāyā at such knowledge of his past shown by this humble trader and eagerly he pressed for explanation. Then Tula dhara spoke to him of the ancient morality known to all—though practised by so few—of living in a way which inflicted harm on none or when harm could not be totally avoided a minimum of such harm. He himself asked no loan from any nor with any quarrelled attraction and aversion he had conquered equal his look on all without praising or blaming any. When a man is fearless and is feared by none when he neither likes nor dislikes when he does no wrong to any then he reaches Brahman. Very beautifully did Tula dhara discourse of the injuries inflicted on animals and on men by cruelty of the nature of sacrifice and of true pilgrimage showing how liberation might be gained by harmless ness.

CHAPTER 1

SACRIFICE

THE idea of offering sacrifices is very familiar in India but a student needs to understand the principle which underlies all sacrifices so that he may realise that every one should sacrifice himself to the good of others and that all sacrifice of other things are meant to teach a man how he ought at last to sacrifice himself.

The first thing to grasp is that creation is sacrifice. Isvara confines Himself, limits Himself in matter in order that a universe may be made manifest. Śruti and Smṛti alike proclaim this truth as in the Purusa sukta of the Rgveda or as in the allusion by Śrī Kṛṣṇa to the formal sacrifice that causes the birth of beings. Immersion in matter is in spiritual language called death and Isvara thus sacrificed Himself in order that He might bring into separate being portions of Himself the Jīvas who might develop all His powers in matter in an infinite variety of forms. This is the primary sacrifice, and on this is based the Law. This also gives us the meaning of sacrifice: it is the pouring out of life for the benefit of others.

The Law of Sacrifice is the Law of Life of all Jivas. In the earlier stages of their growth they are forcibly sacrificed and so progress involuntarily without their own consent or even knowledge, their forms being violently wrenched away from them and they propelled into new ones a little more developed. Thus the Jivas of the mineral kingdom are prepared to pass on into the vegetable by the breaking up of their mineral bodies for the support of plants. The Jivas of the vegetable kingdom are prepared to pass on into the animals by the breaking up of their vegetable bodies for the support of animal life. The Jivas of the animal kingdom are prepared to pass on into the human, by the breaking up of their bodies for the support of other animals, of savages and of certain types of men. And even the Jivas of the human kingdom are prepared to rise into higher races by breaking up of their human bodies for the support of other human lives in cannibalism, war, etc.

In all these cases the bodies are sacrificed for the benefit of others without the consent of the embodied consciousness. Only after untold ages does the Jiva recognise in the body the universality of the law and begin to sacrifice his own upādhis deliberately for the good of those around him. This is called self sacrifice and is the showing forth of the divinity of the Jiva the proof that he is of the nature of Isvara.

A wonderful story of uttermost self sacrifice is told in the Vanabhirata.

Indra the King of the Devas was sore beset by the Asura Vritra born of the wrath of a Rsi whom Indra had offended by an unrighteous act. Vritra heading the Dasyas defeated Indra and his armies in battle drove him away from his capital Amara vati and took away his sovereignty. Long the Devas wandered with their King in exile and repeatedly they made endeavour to regain their capital but were vanquished again and again. Finally they learnt that the righteous wrath of a Rsi could not be allayed except by the voluntary self-sacrifice and pity of another Rsi and that Vritra could be slain by no other weapon than the thunderbolt made with the self given bones of a holy one. And they went eagerly to the Rsi Dadhici and told their woeful tale to him. And he was filled with a great pity and said: "I give to you my body willingly to make what use of it you like." And when their artificer Visvakarm shrank from laying a rude and painful hand upon that shining body of purity and tapas, Dadhici smiled and said: "Cover this body up with salt, bring here a herd of cows they shall lick off the salt and flesh together and ye shall take the bones which only ye require and so naught of this body shall be wasted And this was done and Vṛtra fell before the might born of that wondrous sacrifice

The Jura is led up to this point by the teachings of the Rsis who bid him make sacrifices of his possessions for a good that he does not receive immediately they show him that when a man sacrifices to others, his gifts return to him increased in the future A man is to sacrifice some of his goods, which may be looked on as outlying pieces of himself and he is promised that this act of self denial shall bring him increased possessions Next he was taught to make similar sacrifices and to deny himself present enjoyments in order that he might lay up for himself increased happiness on the other side of death in Svarga Thus the practice of sacrificing was made habitual and man, by sacrificing his possessions in the hope of reward, prepared to learn that it was his duty to sacrifice himself in the service of others and to find in the joy of that service his reward

Another lesson taught in these sacrifices was the relation man bears to all the beings round him, that he is not a solitary isolated life but that all lives are inter dependent and can only prosper permanently as they recognise this inter dependence. The Rsis taught him to sacrifice daily to the Devas to Rsis to ancestors to men and animals and showed him that as all these made sacrifices to enrich his life he had incurred to them a debt a duty which he must pay by sacrifice. As he lives on others he must in common honesty live for others. Sacrifice is right a thing that ought to be done that is owed.

Finally as the Jiva recognises his parentage his identity in nature with Isvara sacrifice becomes happiness a delight and the pouring out of life for others is felt as a joyous exercise of innate divine powers. Instead of seeing how much he can take and how little he can give he tries to see how little he can take and how much he can give. He begins to look very carefully into what he takes for the support of his own upadhis and seeks to reduce to the lowest point the suffering inflicted by the breaking up of lower forms for his support. He abandons the foods and the amusements which inflict pain on sentient beings and tries to become the friend of all creatures. He realises that while the preying of animals on animals of men on men and the slaughter of animals by men for food or sport are necessary at certain stages of evolution for the development of needed faculties and powers men should gradually evolve from these and cultivate the faculties of gentleness sympathy and tenderness regarding the weaker as younger Selves to be helped instead of as victims to be immolated.

As a man lives in such thoughts of his non-separateness from younger Self he begins to feel more really his non-separateness from elder Selves and from the Universal Parent Isvari. Slowly he realises that his true function is to live for others as Isvari lives for all and that his true happiness lies in becoming a channel in which the life of Isvari is flowing a willing instrument to do the will of Isvari. Then every action becomes a sacrifice to Isvari and actions no longer bind him. Thus the law of sacrifice becomes also the law of liberation.

THE WORLDS—VISIBLE AND INVISIBLE

WE all know one world the world around us which we can see and hear and touch and taste and smell Science tells us of many parts of this world which our senses are not keen enough to perceive things too small for our eyes to see too subtle to affect any of our senses These parts of our world which we cannot perceive but about which science tells us are still physical although invisible to us they are parts of our world Physical matter includes solids liquids gases and ethers all made up of atoms of the same kind

But we have heard of other worlds which are invisible and are not a part of this world the worlds into which people go when they pass away from this earth by death We read of the Tri loka the three worlds and every one should know something about these for in these three worlds the Jiva is bound to the wheel of births and deaths and in these his evolution proceeds These three worlds are made at the beginning of immense period called a Day of Brahmā, and perish at its ending. Four other great lokas, or worlds, complete the Brahminḍa but they last on through the life of Brahmā. We need not deal with them here. There are also some subdivisions within the great lokas to which the same name of loka is given such as Preta loka and Pitr loka in Bhūvar loka and Indra loka and Surya loka in Svarga loka.

The three great lokas with which we are concerned the Triloki are Bhūr loka the physical world, or the earth, Bhūvar loka the world of becoming—intermediate between the earth and Svarga Svarga loka the heaven world. Of these three Bhūr loka is partly visible and partly invisible to us. Bhūvar loka and Svarga loka are invisible. In Bhūr loka the Pṛthivyā is the basis of all forms it exists in seven modifications solid liquid gaseous, radiant ethereal super ethereal and atomic. These latter four are spoken as the ethers. In Bhūvar loka seven similar modifications exist but the basis is the Ap tattva. In Svarga loka there are also seven similar modifications but the basis is the Agni tattva.

The Jivāḥa three sheaths corresponding to the three worlds—the Annamaya kośa the Prāṇamaya kośa, the Manomaya kośa. The Annamaya kośa or food sheath—so called because it is built up out of the food we eat—corresponds with the visible part of the earth and is composed of solids liquids and gases. The Prana maya kosa or Prana sheath, corresponds with the invisible part of our earth and is composed of ethers. Prana is the life energy and includes all the forces that science calls magnetic and electrical but is much more than these. Both these sheaths are connected with Bhur loka.

The Mano maya kosa mind sheath has two parts the denser part in which the passions have their seat is connected with Bhuvār loka the finer part in which play the emotions and thought is connected with Svarga loka.

Other names are used for these sheaths according to the object for which the classification is made but the student need not become confused by these for as he advances he will find that his increased knowledge makes them quite intelligible. We will only notice three names very commonly used.

The sthula sarira or solid body is the same as the Anna maya kosa made of solids liquids and gases. The Suksma sarira or subtle body includes the Prana maya kosa and the Mano maya kosa in addition to these it includes another kosa the Vijnana maya kosa the knowledge sheath which connects the Jiva with mahar loka a loka beyond the Triloka in which his pilgrimage is carried on one which is not destroyed though it is rendered uninhabitable, at the close of the Day of Brahmā. This part of the Sūkṣma-sarīra, the knowledge-sheath, is relatively permanent and lasts through the series of births and deaths.

A table may make these two classifications and their relation to the lokas clear.

SĀKIRA	LOKA	KOSA
Sthūla	Bhūr	Ānānaya
Sūkṣma	Bhūr	Prāṇānaya
Sūkṣma	Bhuvā	Mānānaya
Sūkṣma	Svargā	Mānānaya

[These perish at or after death and are renewed at rebirth.]

Sūkṣma	Mahar	Vijñānānaya
--------	-------	-------------

[This does not perish at after death and is renewed at rebirth.]

The Sthūla-sarīra contains the organs of action, the hands, feet and those of speech, generation and excretion, often called the karmendriyas, but the true karmendriyas are the centres which direct and control the organs and in the Sūkṣma-sarīra. Thus joy, or grief or any other emotion affects the centres and through them the organs, the hands twitch, the feet tap, etc. has impeded stimulation and so on. The Jīva-māyās have also their centres in the Sūkṣma-sarīra, and their organs—eyes, ears, tongue, nose and skin—are in the Sthūla-sarīra.

Now let us see what happens at death. First the Sūkṣma-sarīra is separated from the Sthūla-sarīra.

the Jiva drawing it away by means of the Prana maya kosa. This leaves the Sthula sarira a mass of lifeless matter that is of matter from which the life that held it together is withdrawn there is plenty of life left in the cells of the body and they begin to break away from each other but the ruling life is gone. The Jiva remains in his Sukshma sarira. Very quickly he shakes off his Prana maya kosa and has then the denser part of the Mano maya kosa as his outer most garment. He is then called a Preta and is an inhabitant of Preta loka. If he has been a very good man on earth he dreams away happily while in this condition but if he has been a bad man he suffers while a Preta craving for the earthly pleasures which he is no longer able to obtain. After a shorter or longer time—according to the strength of these cravings and the consequent length of time needed for their exhaustion—the densest part of the Mano maya kosa falls away and he goes as a Pitr into Pitr loka. Having spent there sufficient time to purify the Mano maya kosa from all elements unfit for Svarga the Jiva in the purified Mano maya kosa goes on into Svarga and enjoys there the fruit he has stored up.

When this is exhausted the time has come for his return to earth and the purified Mano maya kosa dissolves away leaving the Jiva in the

CUSTOMS AND RITES

CHAPTER I

THE SAMSKARAS

EVERY religion precribes a number of ceremonies or rites to be performed by its followers. The use of the ceremonies speaking generally is (1) to help the Jiva to conquer and purify his sheaths (2) to bring to his aid superior Intelligences such as the Devas and the Rishis (3) to improve the atmosphere around him and so make it easier for him to steady and concentrate his mind.

To this end are used material objects, gestures, postures and sounds all carefully arranged to bring about the results aimed at.

The objects used are chosen for their good magnetism and in many cases—such as particular flowers offered to a particular Deva—because they share the magnetism of the Object of meditation or of worship and thus make a link between that Object and the worshipper. Thus a mala, a rosary of tula beads is used in the worship of Sri Krishna, one of rudraksa in the worship of Mahadeva.

Gestures and postures for the most part affect the Pranas—the subdivisions of the life breath that circulate in the body, some prevent the magnetism of the body from escaping into the surrounding atmosphere, and force its currents to move in a way suitable for calm and quiet thought.

Sounds are used for all the three purposes mentioned above. They give rise to vibrations and as these vibrations are regular and even they make the vibrations of the Sūkṣma śarīrā—which is very sensitive and easily affected—regular and even also. When these vibrations of the Sūkṣma śarīrā are made regular the Jivā is much helped in steadiness of thought and devotion. Sounds of a suitable kind attract the attention of the Rṣis and Devās to the person uttering the sounds and they help him. Further suitable sounds drive away hostile Intelligences and bad magnetic influences and so improve the surroundings of the speaker.

Sounds thus used are called Mantras. A mantra is a succession of sound—a definite sequence the sounds being arranged in a certain order. If the sounds are changed the vibrations are changed and the results will be changed. That is why a mantra cannot be translated. A translated mantra is like a sentence in which all the letters of the words are jumbled up and so convey no meaning.

There is another thing to remember about mantra, if the man who utters a mantra is not trying to lead a good life, the vibrations of the mantra will do him harm not good. For as they work on his Sûksma sarira they bring to bear on it a force antagonist to evil desires and evil thoughts and shake it very violently and may even wound and tear it as his evil resolves make it vibrate in one way and the vibrations of the mantra force it into another. If his resolves are good then they work with the mantra and cause no conflict however weak they may be they aid and do not hinder.

Mantras need not be spoken aloud and their silent repetition is indeed more powerful than audible recitation. They affect the subtler kinds of matter more than the denser.

Among the ceremonies in the life of a Hindu are some important ones that mark the chief stages of his life. In old days these were numerous, ten standing out as the chief, but of these ten only some are now practised. Seven of the Samskara relate to infantile life and early childhood. Of these seven the sixth Anna prasana the first feeding with solid food is universally observed and the seventh Cudakarṇa—the tonsure and with it the piercing of the ears—is performed almost universally. Then comes the important eighth Samskara the Upanayana the leading of the boy to the Guru who gives him the sacred thread and teaches him the Gayatri this initiation making him a Dvija twice born.

The Upanayana is the beginning of the student stage of life during which Brahmacarya (celibacy), is enjoined, and the duty of the lad is study diligently. This stage is closed by the formal return home the Samavartana after which he is ready to enter the second stage of life that of the householder, the Gṛhastha the tenth Samskāra Vivaha, marriage marking his entry into manhood and its responsibilities. In modern India the wholesome rules have fallen into disuse though the Upanayana and Vivaha samskāras are maintained as ceremonies. Marriage is incongruously thrust into the midst of the student life and the duties of manhood and boyhood are mixed up to the injury of both. May the ancient rule be speedily revived.

S'RĀDDHA

S'RĀDDHA is the name of the ceremonies performed to help the Jivā, who has put off his visible body in death, by those who remain in this world. The Jivā that has put off his visible body is called a Preti, and the part of the S'rāddha performed to help him at this stage is called the Preti kṛyā. The visible body, the Anna māvā kṣa, is carried to the burning ground that it may be dissolved into its constituents as quickly as possible; the ashes are gathered together on the third day and are thrown into running water, preferably into a sacred stream. When the Anna māvā kṣa is destroyed, the Prāṇa māvā kṣa rapidly disperses, and this dispersal is quickened by some of the mantras used at the cremation. Burning is the best way of destroying a dead body, and this destruction is important both for the departed Jivā and for those left behind; so long as it remains undissolved, the Prāṇa māvā kṣa hangs round it, in consequence of the magnetic attraction between them, and the Jivā is thus linked to the earth, which is bad for him : on the other hand a slowly decaying body in the ground as in burial sends out poisonous gases and this is bad for those remaining behind

The Śraddha s performed after the burning help in a re arrangement of the materials of the Manomaya kosa partly by the magnetic influences of the objects used and partly by the vibrations set up by the mantra s. After a certain time the Sapindi karana ceremony is performed which helps the Jiva to pass from Preta loka to Pitr loka and he is then enrolled among the Pitr s, or the ancestors living in the subtler regions of Bhuvār loka. Seven generations one in Bhur loka and six in Bhuvār loka can affect each other. When the Jiva passes on into Svarga he has no further need of the help furnished by Śraddha.

Gifts to deserving Brahmana s for the sake of benefit to the Pitr s in the proper times and places and with faith are known as Śraddha.

सुर्यादहरहः श्राद्धपत्राद्येनोदकेन च ।

<sup>1</sup> S'rāddha should be offered to the Patrs, day by day, with corn and water, or even roots and fruits and water, bringing them satisfaction.

पञ्चभ्य एव मात्राभ्यः प्रेय दुष्कृतिना नृणाम् ।

यथायाति धर्म स प्रायशो ऽधर्ममन्यशः ।

तेत्य जातानां भूतैः स्वर्गे सुगमुपास्तुते ॥<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Out of the five elements a (subtler but) firm body is born (as such) for sinful Jivas (after death), that they may suffer punishment therein.

After the suffering of the punishments awarded by Yama in that body (the body) dissolves again into the elements.

If the Jiva has done more Dharma and little Adharma he goes to Svarga and enjoys happiness there embodied in another body composed of the same elements.

चितानोक्षप्रभृति च प्रेतत्वमुपजायत ।<sup>1</sup>

After the cremation is completed (the Jiva) he comes a Preta

दत्तैः पादशभिः श्राद्धं पितृभिः सह मादते ।

पितुः पुत्रेण कृतं सपिण्डाकरणं सदा ॥

The Jiva remains on the path (i.e. the Preta loka) for a year. O best of birds, then he passes on into the Pitr loka (and dwells) with the Pitr s.

By the offering of the sixteen Sraddha s he is helped to dwell in joy with the Pitr s. Therefore should the son ever perform the Sapindi karana rites for the father.

CHAPTER III

S'ALCAM

S'ALCAM or S'amer consists of the rules laid down for keeping bodily purity and thus ensuring physical health and strength. Disease is a sign that some law of nature has been disregarded and the laws—knowing that the laws of nature are the laws of God, the expression of His being and that the Jew is a portion of God enveloped in matter—have treated obedience to the laws of nature as a religious duty.

The visible body with its invisible double, the Prāṇamaya kōśa, being made of physical materials, it is necessary to use physical means to make them pure and to keep them pure and we need to understand them in order to do this.

The visible body the Annamaya kōśa is composed of particles drawn from the food we eat the liquids we drink the air we breathe and from a constant rain of minute particles too tiny for us to see, that falls upon us continually from the people and the things around us. This last statement may sound a little strange but it is true. Our bodies are not made of dead matter for there is no such thing as dead matter<sup>1</sup> Matter is made of tiny living things called atoms and of other tiny living things that are collections of atoms A grain of dust is a collection of myriads upon myriads of tiny living creatures and there are grades upon grades of these minute lives, till we come to what are called microbes that can be seen with the help of microscopes Now these microbes and the other smaller lives are all floating about in the air and our bodies and all things are made up of these Stones plants animals, human beings and all the manufactured things round us, houses, furniture, clothes are constantly giving off clouds of these particles Everything near us, and still more everything we touch, gives us some of its particles and we give it some of ours If we are to be healthy, we must only take into our bodies pure particles and drive away impure ones The rules of S'auca are intended to show us how to do this

The food we eat must be pure Now all things are becoming more alive or are getting nearer death are being built up or are being destroyed Pure food is becoming more alive has life in it which is unfolding its next natural stage is one of 'higher integration' that is of greater complexity

<sup>1</sup> See p. 67 for what is meant by lifeless matter A body as a whole is said to be dead when the Jiva has left it although the particles of it are alive As this dead body decays the living particles are set free

Fresh leaves and fruits, grains and roots, are full of life which is unfolding, we take that life into our bodies, and it builds them up. These things become impure if they are stale, for the life is then departing, they are on the way to death. All flesh is more or less impure, because its indwelling life has been driven from it, and it is ready to decay, its next natural stage is one of disintegration, that is, of breaking up into simpler forms. The body built by it is more liable to disease than the body built of plant products, wounds heal less quickly, and fevers run higher.

Of liquids, pure water is necessary to health and infusions of herbs in it such as tea, coffee and cocoa taken in moderation are harmless and often useful. Milk is at once food and drink of the purest kind. Every form of drink into which alcohol enters is impure and most harmful to the body. It is fermented liquor that is liquor in which decomposition has begun and it injures the tissues of the body and is a distinct poison to the brain. Especially it is mischievous in a hot climate bringing about premature decay and early death. So also are drinks in which enter such stupefying drugs as Indian hemp—the popular but health destroying drug.

Pure air is as necessary to health as pure food and drink. As we breathe we send out a gas called carbon dioxide, which is stupefying, and if we shut ourselves into a confined space, all the air in it becomes laden with this, and unfit to breathe. Further the breath carries out with it waste particles from the interior of the body, and unless the fresh air blows these away, they are breathed in again into our lungs and those of others, and are poisonous in their effects.

We must not only build up our bodies out of clean materials, but we must keep the surface of the body clean by frequent washing and bathing. The whole body must be bathed, at least once every-day, and well rubbed in bathing, so that all loose particles may be washed away, and the skin kept clean and fresh. Any part of the body that becomes soiled, feet, hands, etc., should be washed, and washing before and after food must never be omitted. To eat with unwashed hands is to run the risk of soiling the food with dust and other injurious particles, and the washing after food is obviously imperative. The garments next the body should also be washed daily.

The Hindu, ever accustomed to look at the outer world as the symbol of the inner, has joined to his outer ablutions the idea of inner purification. As he washes the outer body, he repeats mantra-s for the purifying of the inner bodies, and thus weaves his religion into the commonest incidents of daily life.

strictness, but if he be proud, passionate, harsh, vain, suspicious, he is pouring impurity into these kosas faster than any rules can wash it out. In the eyes of the Rsis and the Devas such a one is ever a sruca posterity. No man is truly human who does not recognise what he owes to the past, his debt to the ancestors.

The outer sacrifice to Men is hospitality. Every day a true Aryan should feed some one poorer than himself. The inner meaning is the duty of serving and helping humanity, of feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, sheltering the homeless, comforting the sad. Those who are rich are the stewards of the poor.

The outer sacrifice to Bhutās to creatures is the putting of a little food on the ground before beginning the meal for the invisible lower entities around us, and the placing of the remains of the meal in a suitable place for vagrant men and animals. The inner meaning is the duty of caring for those who are beneath us in the human and in the lower kingdoms, the recognition of our debt to them for their services to us and the practice of kindness and consideration towards them.

Thus the five great daily sacrifices teach man his relations, with all around him with his superiors, his equals and his inferiors. They establish the harmonious relations on which the happiness and prosperity of families and of nations depend. They turn the wheel of life in accord with the will of Isvara, and so help on the evolution of the worlds. They teach each individual that he is

' The Rsi s, the Pitṛ s, the Deva s, the Bhuta s, and guests expect (help) from the householders , hence he who knoweth should give unto them

" Let him worship according to the rule the Rsi s with Veda study the Deva s with Homa the Pitṛ s with S'raddha s men with food and the Bhuta s with Bali to be united with him to feel the unity of the individual self with the supreme Self. It may take the form of praise of His Perfection of prayer rooted in a sense of imperfection of appeal to His Love of recognition of His Power of meditation on His Nature of intense longing for His Unveiling—and many another according to the temperament and the stage of evolution of the worshipper. But whether in the peasant or in the philosopher it is the expression of the longing after Brahman—the expression differs with the emotional and intellectual evolution but the root longings are the same.

The All the Unconditioned is never an Object of worship. Attributes are needed for worship on which the mind can be fixed by which the emotions can be stirred. The Saguna Brahman Isvara is the Object of worship whom all prayers and praises reach to whom all contemplation is directed. He may be adored as Siva or Visnu as Mahadeva or Narayana as Durga or Lakshmi as Ganesa Indra Agni Sarasvati or as an Avatara—Rama or Krishna or Buddha but under whatever name and form it is Isvara who is worshipped.

This explains a matter that often puzzles boys why sometimes Siva sometimes Visnu is spoken of as the Supreme being why one Purana exalts One and another exalts Another. All these are Forms; and Isvara is One. The worshipper is worshipping to unfold symmetrically and harmoniously. This order is imposed by Isvara the Supreme Self on the lower kingdoms of our world the seed the root the stem the leaves the flower the fruit succeed each other in due order and each has its place and its beauty in its season so also He imposes the stages of human life—infancy childhood youth maturity old age this sequence man cannot escape from nor change but the unfolding Jivatman in man clouded by the matter he has not yet mastered pushes irregularly in various directions led by Manas dominated by kama grasping at the things of one stage while yet in another and so hindering his due evolution in each. The child would be a youth the youth a man the old man grasps backward at the joys of youth thus life is robbed of its serenity and thereby of half its usefulness.

Samdhyā the Vaidika and the Tantrika and a boy should perform the Samdhyā according to his caste and family customs. He learns it from a properly qualified instructor and should then practise it daily. Meditation in its definite stages belongs to manhood rather than to boyhood.

In order to counteract this mistaken eagerness and lack of balanced order the great Rsis marked out for the eldest born family of the Aryan race the definite stages in the life of the individual from birth to death and the definite stages in the life of the Jivatman in his long evolution through myriads of births and deaths. In each case these stages are four in the life between one birth and one death they are called Asrama = resting places dwellings in the life passing through countless births and deaths they are called Varna = colours or castes the boy. He must be hardy and simple in his habits; these virtues make his body strong and healthy. He acquires them by rising early, bathing, eating moderately of plain food, taking plenty of exercise, not allowing himself to lounge luxuriously and idly. Contrast a boy who lives in this way with one who lies late in bed, who over eats himself on sweetmeats and rich dishes, who takes little exercise and spends much of his time lying on soft pillows. The one is alert, strong, hard muscled, vigorous, active and will be a strong healthy man; the other is heavy, flabby, fat, lazy, or too thin and weak and will soon be diseased and suffering.

The student must also strive for the virtues of industry, obedience, humility and serviceableness. Youth is the preparation time of life and industrious study to acquire knowledge is absolutely necessary for useful manhood. Obedience, by using the experience of his elders to guide his conduct and saves him many a trouble in early life and only he who knows how to obey is fit to rule hereafter. Humility lifts him quickly as all are willing to share what they have with the humble and serviceableness in the narrow circle of the family and the school builds up the nature that will serve humanity.

The student must be chaste in thought and act as a celibate in mind and body. He must guard his thoughts, for the boy who does not think duties with those of the student, caused by the modern evil of student marriage has deprived the entry into it of its ancient solemnity and dignity. The plucking and eating of unripe fruit deprives the eater of its sweetness.

Certain well born but thoughtless Brahmana youths, abandoning their home before due time went into the forests to lead a life of asceticism. Indra pitied them, and, assuming the form of a golden bird, taught them. Follow the household life! It is the field for the cultivation of virtues. It is sacred. Worship of the Devas, study, repayment of the debt to the pitrs by the rearing of a family, and helping on new lives as we have been reared and helped—these are the austere penances. Bear the heavy burden of the duties of the household! They that run away from their work fall into sin. To eat the remnant of the food left after helping the needy, is to eat the true remnant of sacrifice.

When the householder sees his sons able to bear the full burden of his duties, when the signs of age appear, and his children's children are round him, the time has come for him and his wife to surrender the headship of the home, and to retire from active life and worldly labour. A quiet and somewhat secluded life given to study, to self sacrifice for the good of better state of things may be brought about is a question for men to discuss and resolve not for inexperienced boys. What we need here is to understand the meaning of caste.

We have said there are four stages.

The first is that which includes the infancy, childhood and youth of the Jivatman. He is unfolding youthful virtues, developing obedience, serviceableness, patience. He has few responsibilities. His duties may be summed up in the word Service. Where there is no caste confusion such young Jivatmans are born only into the lower social stratum. They are labourers, artisans, servants, manual workers of every kind. In the social polity of the Sanatana dharma such Jivatmans were born into the caste of Sudras. In these days of caste confusion such young Jivatmans, whether born in the Sudra caste in India or into the corresponding class elsewhere, are happy, contented and useful, but where as often happens now-a-days they are born into higher castes or classes. They do much harm to their surroundings by their incapacity to discharge higher duties and to bear the weight of higher responsibilities. So also difficulties arise when older Jivatmans are born into the lower bodies and fret against their environment, are discontented and rebellious. Of course a really advanced Jivatman is content in any body, but the mediocre Jivatmans quite naturally and

The fourth stage embraces the serene age of the Jivatman when earthly things have lost their charm and he becomes the counsellor and friend and helper of all his younger. This includes the priest the counsellors the teachers of every kind—authors scientists poets philosophers. In the social polity of the Sanatana dharma all Jivatmans were born into the caste of Brahmana the advanced and unselfish ones who gave much and needed little. Calamitous confusion in India has struck this caste most hardly as the degradation of the higher is always worse than that of the lower. The Sudra Jivatman in the Brahmana body is the greatest danger to the Sanatana dharma.

Much of the evil has grown from men of each caste grasping at the work of the other castes and from each thinking more of the rights his caste give him than of the duties it imposes. The Brahmana and the Ksattriya have claimed their privileges ardently, and have shrunk from the heavy burdens belonging to their castes. Naturally this attitude has provoked opposition and antagonisms have replaced mutual service and good will. Hence caste has become a source of social bitterness instead of a framework maintaining all in happy order.

At least this much every boy can do towards bringing about a happier state of things he can

Such are the many names for the two parts of this cyclical movement

After having passed through very many other living forms referred to before in pt I ch II the Spirit comes to the stage of man. Then it becomes or rather, makes itself subject to the laws of conscious Karma and its consequences

Now when the spirit or soul has advanced to a fairly high stage in evolution as man after many births it becomes able to ask and asks itself consciously What am I? What is all this? Why is all this? What is the meaning and purpose of life? Slowly it discovers answers as above with the help of the teachings embodied in the Scriptures by the Elders of the Race. The Meaning of Life is as just said first Play Pastime Lila Krida then haivalyam resting quietly in Solitude Alone All one first Waking then Sleeping first Activity then Rest. The Purpose of Life always is the achievement of Happiness Pleasure Joy Bliss. That is clearly the object of Play as well as Rest. But broadly two kinds of Happiness may be distinguished. One is that which arises from contact with the objects of the senses either in direct or in indirect connection with them. The other is that which arises from complete rest and repose within one Self in deep sound slumber after tiring of and retiring from all sense objects

In accordance with the Meaning and Nature of Life the Purpose of Life becomes twofold (a) first the securing of Pleasure or Sense enjoyment Abhyudaya Prosperity in this world then (b) the achievement of Happiness or Spiritual Bliss Nih sreyasa the Greatest Good. Because the life of the human being is not lived as solitary but in Society: therefore it is not possible for anyone to achieve either Pleasure or Happiness without a proper organisation of society and a proper planning out of the individual life. Hence we have the scheme of varna s and asrama s. By the due observance of the rules of this scheme it becomes possible for every human being to secure a reasonable amount of Sense enjoyment in the first two asrama s and then gradually to achieve Spiritual Bliss in the next two. Because refined cultured sense enjoyment such as befits human beings living in Society is not possible without a reasonable amount of property and the secure possession and use of such property is not possible without mutual understanding and self restraint therefore the Purpose of Sense enjoyment Abhyudaya becomes subdivided into three (1) Kama the pleasure of the senses and the fine arts to be rationally enjoyed in the Family life and as subserved and refined by (2) Artha riches useful and artistic possessions Property acquired sattva rajas tamas i.e. the transcendence of these three rising superior to these three knowing them to be the qualities of the Changeful Many (Pt I ch II supra) Prakṛti and not of the Changeless Supreme Being the One Existence Paramatman the Supreme Self. Another way of explaining this triad of Mokṣa is that the tamas aspect of it is Bhakti universal love the rajas aspect Yogaisvarya yoga siddhi = yogic powers used for the service of living beings and the sattva aspect Jñāna or Prajñāna and Virakti or Mukti proper extinction of all selfishness freedom from all selfish desire and the constant awareness that All Life is One Life though manifesting in conflicting and mutually balancing and neutralising opposites.

In the light of these four ends of life we can now understand the good use of all the details of the Varnāśrama dharma Vaidika dharma Sanātana dharma or Manava dharma as it is variously called. They all help us to achieve these ends duly.

Sanātana dharma is so called because it is the Dharma the Scheme of Laws of mutual rights and duties human and divine which arises out of the Nature of the One and Only Sanātana Everlasting i.e. the Paramatman.

ETHICAL TEACHINGS

ETHICAL SCIENCE WHAT IT IS

SCIENCE is a definitely arranged body of knowledge of facts related to each other. A collection of facts does not make a science; the facts must be systematically arranged in their relations to each other and the principles underlying these relations must be known before the collection can be called a science. ETHICAL means that which relates to conduct, to the way in which rational beings should behave towards each other as well as towards other creatures. When therefore we speak of Ethical Science we do not mean a list of virtues and vices but we mean a definite and systematically arranged series of facts of conduct in their proper relations to each other and of the underlying principles of these relations.

Another word for Ethics is morality, right conduct and in order to know what is right we have to understand something about man and his surroundings.

आचारप्रभवो धर्मो धर्मादायुर्विवर्धते ।

आचाराहृमते ह्यायुराचाराहृमते श्रियम् ॥

आचारात्कीर्त्तिमाप्नोति पुरुष प्रेय चेह च ॥<sup>1</sup>

The mark of Dharma is Ācara (good conduct) Ācara is the mark of the good Higher than all teachings is Ācara From Ācara is Dharma born and Dharma enhances life By Ācara man attains life By Ācara he attains fame here and hereafter

आचारः परमो धर्मः श्रुत्युक्त स्मार्त एव च ।

तस्मादस्मिन्सदा युक्ता नित्य स्यादात्मवान्द्विज ॥

एवमाचारतो दृष्ट्वा धर्मस्य मुनयो गतिम् ।

Ācara is the highest Dharma declared by the S'ruti and the Smṛti Therefore let the twice born that knoweth the Self ever diligently engage therein

Thus beholding the path of Dharma issue from Ācara the sages embraced Ācara as the root of all Tapas anything for (such attachment) is the great frustrator of Dharma (religion etc) Artha (wealth) Kama (pleasure) and Moksa (emancipation)

Of these (four) too Moksa is the truly ultimate end for the other three are ever haunted by the fear of Death the Ender

धर्मं चार्थं च कामं च यथावद्वदता वर ।

The wise man O best of speakers that knoweth the proper times serveth Dharma Artha and Kama all three evenly dividing his time between them (on the Pravṛtti marga the path of outgoing)

But O king all beings desire happiness and Moksa (belonging to the Nivṛtti marga the path of return) : the highest good for them innumerable minds and these bodies and minds come into relations with each other. There can never be right relations until each separate mind and body act to other minds and bodies on the principle that they are at root one that what helps all is the only thing that really helps each and that what injures one really injures all. In hurting another we are really hurting ourselves. If a hand cut the foot belonging to its own body the blood would flow from the foot not from the hand but presently the hand would grow weak for the blood circulates in the whole body and there is only one supply for all parts of the body. So also with men and if one man wounds another the wounder suffers as much as the wounded only the suffering takes longer in making itself felt.

This then is the foundation of right conduct as seen by the Reason. Boys have at first to take moral precepts on the authority of great Sages and Saints as taught in the Śāstra because they have not the power nor the time to think them out for themselves. But they can in their manhood verify these precepts given in the Sanātana dharma by applying their Reason to them.

The One Self is in all beings every Jivatman is a portion or reflection of the One Self. Let this principle sink deeply into every heart and let each remember that he who injures another injures

He in whose consciousness full of perfected knowledge all beings have become the Self—in him thus beholding the unity there is no more any delusion nor any sorrow

सर्वभूतस्थमात्मानं सर्वभूतानि चात्मनि ।

The self harmonised by yoga seeth the Self abiding in all beings all beings in the Self everywhere he seeth the same

learn that he himself is only a part or reflection of a much greater I — the Isvara and that all his powers can only bring happiness if used as a part of that greater I. Then he begins to see the Unity under the diversity and turns away from his little separate self to realise the One Self. He tries to give to all that are weaker than he is to share with himself in other bodies and minds what he has accumulated in his own. This is called the Nivṛtti marga, the path of return on which the Jivatman is seeking to realise himself as one with all by sharing all he has with all who need.

These two paths make up what is called evolution and along this road of evolution the Will of Isvara in His aspect of Vāsnu is guiding His universe. To work with this Will is Right to work against it is Wrong.

Now the world as a whole is at the turning point where the Pravṛtti marga changes to the Nivṛtti marga. Most people are still on the Pravṛtti marga but their way onwards their higher evolution lies along the Nivṛtti marga. Hence right conduct consists of the desires, thought and actions that help oneself and others to tread the Nivṛtti marga the path that leads to Union. We must aim at decreasing separateness at increasing unity. All that lessens separateness and leads towards unity is Right all that increases separateness and leads

He may not overlook the slightest wrong done to the meanest of his subjects if he wish himself and his country well. The sin that attaches to the killing of a person that should not be killed is equal to the sin of not slaying one that deserves to be slain. The king should ever exact with firmness yea severity from all his subjects their respective duties. If he does not do this then will they grow about unchecked like wolves murdering the weaker and devouring each other. It has been sung of old

She alone is a wife that speaketh pleasantly. He alone is a son that maketh his sire happy. He alone is a friend who may be safely trusted. That verily, is the motherland wherein living is earned. He alone is a king who ruleth strictly without oppression in whose territories the righteous have no fear who cherisheth the poor and punisheth the wicked.

The Asrama s and the Varna s were given in order to shew people what kind of virtues they should aim at in the particular place and time in which they find themselves and thus to help on their orderly evolution. As all men have not the power nor the time to find out for themselves the Will of Ishvara the S'astras have been given to tell us of that Will and so to help us in distinguishing between Right and Wrong. But some general rules ness modesty absence of tickleness vigour forgiveness fortitude purity absence of envy and pride.<sup>1</sup> Such virtues draw men together and are based on the knowledge that all selves are one. On the other hand see how those He marks as Āsuric the qualities which drive man apart promote divisions.

 'Hypocrisy arrogance and conceit wrath and also harshness and un wisdom. And his description of the Āsuric type of man shews one who is full of aham kara egoism and selfishness.

Let the young student then grasp firmly this distinction between Right and Wrong and apply it to the guidance of his conduct. In later study he will add much to his thoughts on Right and Wrong will learn many details and have to solve many complexities but this principle this standard will remain unaltered for it is based on evolution and is in accord with the will of Isvara.

CHAPTER V

VIRTUES AND THEIR FOUNDATION

WE have already seen that mutual sacrifice another name for mutual service is enjoined by the Sanatana dharma and it is easy to see that this is Right since it promotes union. Thus the five daily sacrifices promote union between the sacrificer and Rsi's Deva's Pitṛ's Men and Animals. Another way in which the Sanatana dharma teaches us to do right is by explaining to us the three debts that we owe the debt to the Rsi's paid chiefly in the Brahma carva Āsrama by study and by service of the teacher the debt to the Pitṛ's the Ancestors, paid chiefly in the Garha sthā Āsrama by rearing a family and by charity the debt to the Deva's paid chiefly in the Vana prastha Āsrama by sacrifice and meditation.

A debt is something we owe we have received and should repay. This payment of debt of what is due is called the discharge of duty that which we owe to others which we ought to do. The discharge of a duty is called a virtue the non discharge of a duty is called a vice. A virtuous man harm results and vices arise. This description of the nature of virtues as forms of Truth corresponds again with our standard of Ethics for truthfulness promotes union while untruthfulness increases separateness.

Truthfulness has always been a marked characteristic of the noble characters described in Hindu literature. My lips have never uttered an untruth is a favourite phrase of the Heroes. Sri Kṛṣṇa promised not to carry arms on Kuru kṣetra and when He ran towards Bhīṣma with uplifted whip to help Arjuna Arjuna refused His help because of His promise. So also Yudhiṣṭhira though almost despairing of victory would not take His help because of that same promise.<sup>1</sup> On the other hand we read that when Yudhiṣṭhira for a moment in his utmost need forgot his truthfulness and told a lie to the undoing of Drona his war chariot lost the power that upraised it from the earth and it sank to the ground.<sup>2</sup> When the Pandava's were yet in the forest and Sri Kṛṣṇa suggested that Yudhiṣṭhira might send an army against the Kuru's thus breaking the spirit of the promise that they would remain thirteen years in exile Yudhiṣṭhira's answer was 'The sons of Pandu swerve not from the path ancient story says with a natural armour that no weapons could pierce through. The Devas ever working that the cause of the Pandavas might prevail were sorely anxious lest in the predestined combat between Karna and Arjuna the latter should fail because of that strong armour. It was Karna's rule that he, in facing the day, every day studying the Vedas till the sun turned the zenith and he had vowed that during that period of his Veda study every day whatsoever a Brahmana asked of him that he had to give he would give to him unfailingly. And one day Indra, the King of the Devas, seeing no other way took on the semblance of an aged Brahmana and appeared before Karna and said he had a boon to ask. And Karna said that he would surely give it if it were at all within his power. Then Indra said: Give me this armour that you wear by nature on your body. Karna replied: I know thee now to be no artless Brahmana but the King of the Devas himself disguised to help the cause of the Pandavas. But even the letter of my given word must be respected. Take what thou askest though in giving thee this with I know I give my life and what is even more than life to me the only chance of conquering my soldier rival Arjuna in battle. And Karna hewed off that living armour piece by piece with his own hand and sword and gave it all to Indra winning disguised as a dwarf came to the sacrifice and begged as soon as much land as He could cover in three paces. S'ukra the preceptor of Bali bade him refuse to carry out his gift since Vamana was VIsnu. Bali answered: The grandson of Prahlada shall never speak untruth. I will give to this Brahmana boy what I promised even if he be VIsnu and my enemy. And when Vamana had covered the Tri lokī with two paces and demanded a third foothold Bali offered his own head and took as favour the loss of all his kingdom. And for this VIsnu blessed him declaring: His wealth gone his position lost himself overpowered and chained by enemies forsaken by friends reviled and cursed by his own preceptor Bali forsook not truth. The purana s say that for such acts of truth by the blessing of VIsnu Bali will be the next Indra when the present Deva whose proper name is Puram dara vacates that office (for Indra is the title of the great office of the sovereign of the divine kingdom not a personal name).

As truth is Brahman those who seek Brahman must be truthful. Above and beyond all else therefore a boy should strive for truthfulness.

CHAPTER VI

BLISS AND EMOTIONS

WE have seen that Isvara is Thought, Power and Bliss and man as His child has also these characteristics. When the Jivatman becomes wrapped in dense matter, the aspect of his nature which is Bliss, is ever going outwards in search of satisfaction trying to realise itself by uniting itself with the outer world. The impulses outwards are called desires, and when they unite the Jivatman to an object that gives him pleasure so that he desires to be again united to such an object the resulting emotion is called love, or liking. When, on the contrary, they unite the Jivatman to an object that gives him pain, so that he desires to avoid union with such an object again the resulting emotion is called hate, or dislike. The first makes an attraction between the Jivatman and the object the second makes a repulsion.

The Jivatman thinks over these likes and dislikes, and gradually trains himself to direct his emotions rightly emotions thus guided by reason in accordance with the will of Isvara develop into Virtues and thus the culture of the emotions forms the ethical development of man. As he cultivates the emotion called love he unites himself to an ever widening circle of beings the family the community, the nation the race loving them as his self and this love becomes a continually increasing expression of the Bliss aspect of his nature which finds satisfaction in union.

We have seen that evolution is now leading us towards union or in other words that the will of Isvara is guiding the separated selves towards union with each other and with Himself. In this union is Bliss therefore the Right and the Happy are inseparable. Over and over again the Sanatana dharma leads us to this one conclusion. Brahman is bliss therefore the Jivatman being of the nature of Brahman is also bliss and unhappiness only arises when he goes against evolution against the great Will of God and goes wrong.

CHAPTER VII

SELF REGARDING VIRTUES

WE have seen that the Jivatman is related to all around him and that Ethics is concerned with making his relations with others harmonious. But we must not forget that he is most closely related to his own kosa's or bodies the parts of the Not Self that he has most closely united to himself and that unless he is in harmonious relations with these he can hardly hope to be in harmonious relations with the bodies that are further away from him. While he is young these bodies of his master him and lead him into all sorts of trouble; as he grows older he begins to try to master them and many a hard fight he has with them before he develops the great virtues called self control—the control of the lower selves by the higher Self of the bodies by the Jivatman. Virtues that belong to these bodies considered by themselves rather than in connection with the relations between different Jivatmans are called self regarding in modern classifications. But every one can see that a person who has these virtues will promote harmonious relations with others much more than one who has them not.

Manu, the great law giver lays much stress on the necessity for this self control and gives some most valuable advice about it. He says that action has three forces behind it and that each of these must be mastered. Action is born of mind, speech and body.

The mind—the Mano maya kosa which includes the emotions—must be conquered. This is the hardest task of all. For the mind runs after the objects of desire swayed and controlled by the longings to possess the objects which promise to give pleasure. The emotions are ever craving satisfaction and the mind seeks to gratify them becoming their slave. The Jivatman must free the mind from this slavery and subdue it for his own service making it the master of the senses and the sense organs. As Manu says: In conquering this (the mind) the two sets of five become conquered.<sup>1</sup> The two sets of five are the ten *Indriya*s that is the five *Jnanendriya*s and the five *karmendriya*s.

Let the student then aim at ruling his mind if it runs to evil things let him call it black, let him allow it to fix itself only on good things. This is the first the most difficult the most essential part of self control

The control of speech is the next step we must think before we speak. Hasty speech leads us into endless troubles. Arjuna was often very hasty in his speech and so got himself into many difficulties as in his hasty vow to slay himself if he did not kill Jayad ratha the slayer of his son before sunset thus necessitating the interference of Sri Kṛṣṇa who shrouded the sun prematurely to induce Jayad ratha to come out from his shelter. So again in his quarrel with Yudhiṣṭhira provoked by Yudhiṣṭhira's taunting speech and on other occasions Nay his failure to keep a hasty vow led to his death on the Great Journey. Arjuna said he would consume all our foes in a single day. Proud was he in his heroism but he did not what he boasted. Hence has he fallen down. He who has conquered his tongue is near to self mastery.

Thirdly the physical body must be controlled and not be allowed to hurry us into sin for its gratification. Says Sri Kṛṣṇa. Worship of the Devas the twice born the gurus and the wise purity straightforwardness chastity and harmlessness are called the austerity of the body. Youth is the time for conquering the body for it is then most easily subdued and set in the right way. For the body is a creature of habit and though at first it will oppose the will of the Jivatman with great energy a little perseverance makes it give way and then it goes as contentedly and readily along the new road as it did along the old.

Among the sources of evil and of sorrow that we should strive to get rid of by this self control is selfish desire for out of the insatiable desire for material wealth and material pleasures grow many miseries and peace rises from the absence of the desires and not by their continued gratification. Thus Manki found. For greed of wealth Manki had searched for it long but ever he seemed doomed to disappointment. With the last remnant of his property he bought a pair of calves to train up for the plough. But fate ordained that the cord with which the two were tied should get entangled with a passing camel so that both were killed. This last mischance opened the heart of Manki so that desire fled thence unconfined and Manki burst forth into song. He that desires happiness must renounce desire. Well did Suka say that of these two—the one who gets all that he wishes and the one who casts off every wish—the latter who renounces all is surely much superior to the former for none can ever attain to the end of all desires. Do thou O my soul, so long a slave to greed taste now for once the joys of freedom and tranquillity. Long have I slept, but I shall sleep no longer. I shall wake. No more shalt thou deceive me O Desire. Whatever object thou didst fix my heart on that didst thou force me to follow heedless never pausing to enquire if it were easy or impossible to gain. Thou art without intelligence. Thou art a fool. Ever unsatisfied, thou burnest like a fire always hmbent for more offerings. Thou art impossible to fill like space itself. Thy one wish is to plunge me into sorrow. This day we part. From this day, O Desire I live no longer in thy company. I think no more of thee or of thy train. I cast thee off, with all the passions of my heart. I who was harassed with despair before have now attained to perfect peace of mind. In full contentment of the heart senses at ease shall I live henceforth on what comes to me, and labour no more for the satisfaction of thy wishes, O my foe. Casting off thee and all thy train I gain at once instead tranquillity and self restraint forgiveness and compassion and deliverance. Thus Manki lost a little and gained all.<sup>1</sup>

Hear also the story of King Yayati, who driven mad by wild desire took from his own son his fair and splendid youth to strive to fill therewith the ever gaping maw of Desire the insatiable. For thus the story runs

King Yayāti son of Nihusa of the Lunar Dynasty of Kings was over fond of the pleasures of sense and fell into sin which brought upon him the wrath of his father in law the great Rsi Ś'akra the priest of the Titan Kings. Because of that wrath King Yayati was suddenly struck with shrivelled and tottering old age in the very midst of his glorious prime of manhood. He propitiated the Rsi and Sukra taking pity on him decreed that he could exchange for a thousand years his age and feebleness for the health and youth of any of his sons who should consent willingly to the exchange. Yayati asked his five sons in succession the fifth and youngest Puru for love and reverence of his father gave him his own youth and took from him his age for the period of a thousand years. For that long period King Yayati assiduously pursued the pleasures of the senses endeavouring to exhaust the luxuries of the world of matter. But ever he found that his craving grew even when his senses dulled with satiation. He longed in vain that his longing for the world of sense should be exhausted by fulfilment. As one spoke of a wheel running after another spoke of it the chase was endless. At the last as the thousand years approached their close a great varagya arose in his mind and he saw that desire ceases not with satisfaction but with frustration. He called Puru to him took back his own old age with gladness and gave to him his youth together with the kingdom and retired into the forests chanting the verse that summed up all his life experience

Desire may not be quenched by enjoyment of its objects it only increases manifold therewith as fire with libations of butter

Let us pause a moment on the word 'harmlessness' in the above quotation of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's words p Harmlessness is the highest Dharma Bhīṣma taught We should injure nothing Our life should be a source of help not of harm The control of the body includes this abstention from injuring others As said Brhaspati That man who practises the religion of universal compassion achieves the highest good One should never do that to another which one regards as injurious to one's own self This in brief is the rule of righteousness

People often harm others in mere thoughtlessness and so bring about much trouble When Yudhiṣṭhira and Duryodhana and their brothers were boys and all lived and studied together Bhīma who was the strongest of them all often indulged in practical jokes and rough horse play exercising his great strength with boyish thoughtlessness upon the younger and weaker boys. When a number of them climbed up into a tree to pluck the fruit, he would take the trunk between his hands and shake the tree, till the little boys tumbled down like ripe fruits. Bhima thought it was great fun and laughed, but some of the boys were hurt, hurt in body, and what was worse, hurt in mind. Again, when they were out bathing and swimming in the river that flowed beneath the walls of Hastinapura, Bhima would swim underneath the other boys, and, catching hold of a number of them, would dive into the water, and hold them there till they were almost drowned, while his own greater lung capacity helped him efficiently against similar distress. He delighted in this, but the others were agonised. What was the consequence? A smouldering fire of repulsion and dislike, that later on grew into a blazing fire of hate that consumed Kaurava and Pandava alike. The boyish thoughtlessness of Bhima was one of the chief causes of the Great War. It is true that unless the combustibles are there the spark will not kindle the fuel, unless the tissues are tainted, the microbe will not develop the disease, still it is our duty to guard against such a destructive spark, such a death-bringing microbe as long and as carefully as we can. When thoughtless exercise of strength hurts the weak who cannot retaliate, then the anger, that is born but is not vented, becomes transformed into what is contemptuously called hate and malice but is in reality far less to blame than the careless spoliation of the weaker by the stronger. To the superficial eye of one who is himself equally inclined in his secret mind to oppression such acts may appear blameless or even magnificent. But to the just eye of a true chivalry they will always appear in their real character of meanness and tyranny. And he who studies the Great History carefully knows well that the Pandava's were not all to praise nor the Kaurava's all to blame.

The triple control of mind, speech and body results in righteousness in right character expressing itself in right conduct. The man who has thus put himself into right relations with the things nearest to him his own emotions, mind and body, and has thus partially acquired the virtues classified as self regarding or egoistic in western ethical books is able to practise more effectively those classified therein as altruistic, those which arise in relation to other living beings.

We have now to study the virtues and vices which arise in the relations between human beings. These are best classified under three heads.

1. The virtues and vices which arise in relation to superiors
2. The virtues and vices which arise in relation to equals

3 The virtues and vices which arise in relation to inferiors

In this way we shall obtain a clear and simple classification of the virtues which make our relations with all around us harmonious and seeing them distinctly we can strive to attain them. And we shall also see plainly the vices which make disharmony and can try to avoid them. All the virtues have their root in pure Love and have Bliss for their fruit. All the vices have their root in personal Hate and their fruit is Misery.

CHAPTER VIII

VIRTUES AND VICES IN RELATION TO SUPERIORS

LOVE which is unselfish prompts us to make sacrifices for others and to restrain ourselves for the common good therefore such love is the root of virtues of the qualities that promote union So also hate prompts us to take from others to grasp at all desirable things for our own separate enjoyment to the injury of others ; therefore hate is the root of vices, of the qualities that promote separateness Moreover, when we make a sacrifice for one we love, we feel happiness in making it and we thus learn that the deepest happiness real bliss lies in giving which is the joy of the Jivatman and not in taking which is the joy of the bodies

Let us see how love impels a man to act in relation to his superiors to those to whom he looks up A man's superiors are God Sovereign Parents Teachers, and the Aged

Love to God shows itself as Reverence Devotion, Worship and Submission to His Will We find all lovers of God show these virtues See how Bhisma reverences and worships S'ri Kṛṣṇa, the Avatara of Viṣṇu at the Rāja sūya sacrifice of Yudhiṣṭhira. Bhisma bids them offer the first arghya to Him and Narada declares that "He who approveth not the worship offered unto Kṛṣṇa, the oldest One in the universe deserveth neither soft words nor consideration. Those men that will not worship Kṛṣṇa with eyes like lotus petals should be regarded as dead though moving. And so also when Bhisma lay dying he was thinking of Kṛṣṇa in mind word and act and his one thought was to receive His blessing. He closed the great exhortation with the recital of the thousand names of Vasudeva and his last words ere bidding all fare well asked S'ri Kṛṣṇa's permission to depart."

In Prahlada the son of the Dutya King Hiranya-kasipu we have one of the most famous examples of devotion. Despite all his teachers could say, he steadily prayed to and praised Hari. In vain did his father threaten him and seek to kill him, the wild elephant who should have trampled on him failed to injure, the rocks that should have crushed him lay light as down on his bosom, the sword that should have struck off his head fell blunted from his neck, the poison that should have carried death

along his veins proved harmless as water and at last Nara simha, the Avatara burst from the granite pillar, and delivered Hari's servant from the tyrant who sought to slay

Dhruva leaving his father's palace to flee from the unkindness of his step mother shows such fervour of devotion and such courage and steadfastness in worship, that Hari appears to him and gives him as throne the pole star on the boundary of the Tri loka, whereon he lives and reigns

Nothing, perhaps, is more marked in the perfect human character of Rama candra than His unwavering submission to the Divine Will Over and over again during the whirl that followed His sudden exclusion from the throne He calms those around Him by reminding them that all that happens is by the good law, and He Himself is utterly unshaken by the storm, knowing the Real amid all changing unrealities

On the other hand, we read constantly of the overthrow of those who do not honour the Supreme Lord Mighty rulers like Ravana, who was monarch in Lanka, fell because they thought themselves rivals of Isvara, and set themselves against His loving will for the worlds<sup>1</sup> Jara sandha the King of Magadha refusing though bidden by S'ri Kṛṣṇa to set free the kings he had captured was slain by Bhīma. S'isupala fell before the discus of the Lord he denied. Duryodhana perished with his friends and followers for his persistent rejection of S'ri Kṛṣṇa's counsels; the list might be extended for many pages. Out of all these shines out the warning that those who show hate to Isvara must perish.

Loyalty to the Head of the State is equally insisted on in the Śāstra's not only by direct command but by example. When Yudhiṣṭhira is king in Indraprastha and his four brothers go out to war they bring to his feet all the wealth they gained; they fought for their king not for themselves. So when Yudhiṣṭhira was exiled after the gambling match and the people came out to follow him leaving their allegiance to Dhṛtarāṣṭra the loyal prince bade them return to Hastinapura and obey their proper ruler since only thus could they secure the general prosperity.

This loyalty was fostered in the people by the devotion to duty imposed on the king and by the high ideal of kingship insisted on. Utthava of the race of Angiras, instructing the King Mam dhātr, son of Yuvanasva said One becometh a king in order that he may uphold righteousness, and not that he may conduct himself capriciously The king is the protector of the world, O Mam dhātr ! If he act righteously he attaineth to the honours of a veritable God upon earth But if he act unrighteously he sinketh into hell All creatures rest upon righteousness and righteousness in turn, resteth upon the king That king alone is a true king who upholdeth righteousness If he fail to chastise unrighteousness, the Deva s desert his mansions and he incurreth obloquy among men

Patriotism, the love of one's country and Public Spirit caring for the nation more than for oneself, are virtues that are so closely akin to loyalty that they should never be separated from it "King and country are the object of true loyalty No man should be without this love of country and the readiness to sacrifice himself for his native land for national greatness cannot exist without patriotism and public spirit, and national greatness means, in the long run, family and individual prosperity the whole and the part cannot be separated Public spirit makes a man feel the successes and the sufferings of his country as though they were his own—as indeed they are It makes him try to protect the weak from injustice to resist wrong, to uphold the law, to stand for justice to refuse to make unfair profit at the cost of the community or to cheat it by evading what is due to it from himself. The heroes of ancient India are constantly described as intent on the welfare of others. Sri Krishna bids Arjuna set to the protection of the masses to the maintenance of mankind. The man who thinks only of himself and of his family is shortsighted and is really undermining his and their future happiness.

To Parents is due ever the most complete Obedience and this is one of the most often repeated injunctions of the Sanatana dharma. See how Rama cut off the Great Example obeys his father. When Drona rather is inveigled into granting Rama's exile and the son is told by Kaikeyi that His father fears to speak his will. Speak O honoured lady, the desire of the king is His quick reply and I will carry it out. There is no service greater than service of the father than carrying out his words. And to all arguments counselling resistance. He gives the steadfast answer. There is no power in me to transgress my father's order. I shall abide by my father's orders. And later when His father was dead and Bharata no unwilling regent held

His crown in trust all His answer to Bharata's passionate pleadings that He should ascend the throne was that His father had sent Him to the forest, and had placed Bharata on the throne each must do his own task according to the father's word. What My father hath commanded must not be made untrue.

Again we read in the Maha bhārata the story of the knower of Brahman shrouded in the impure body of a fowler, who led to his parents the Brahmana Kausika who came to learn wisdom at his feet. The fowler took the Brahmana to the beautiful rooms in which he had housed his aged parents saying that his own happy state of knowledge and peace was due to his filial piety. Having bowed low at their feet he introduced his guest and then told him 'These my parents are the idols that I worship, whatever is due to the Devas I do to them. . . To me they are like the three sacred fires mentioned by the learned and O Brahmana they seem to me to be as good as sacrifices or the four Vedas. The two parents the sacred fire the soul, and the guru these five O good Brahmana are worthy of the highest reverence. He then told Kausika that he had acted wrongly in leaving his parents in his anxiety to learn the Vedas and that he should go back to them and console them. Return to the side of thy father and mother and be diligent in honouring thy parents for I do not know if there be any virtue higher than this.<sup>1</sup>

Who does not know how Bhishma won the boon that Death should not touch him until he himself permitted it by resigning throne and marriage to win for his father the bride for whom, in silence the father's heart was yearning? King Śāntanu of the lunar race of kings wished to marry the beautiful Satyawati but struggled against himself for the sake of his son Bhishma. A step mother he thought might not be kind to his beloved son. The care born of the struggle showed on King Śāntanu's face and Bhishma made enquiry of the ministers and learned the cause. He went to the father of Satyawati and asked that she be married to the king. The father said: The king is aged thou shalt shortly reign in his stead. I would rather marry my daughter to thee. But Bhishma replied:

Say not such a thing. When my father has wished to marry her she is my mother already. Give her to the king. Then Satyawati's father said: But I shall do so only if her son succeeds the king in sovereignty. Bhishma said at once: I promise to forego my birth right. I shall place that younger brother of mine upon the throne. But Satyawati's father said again: We know thy word once given may not be broken. But what shall bind thy sons from disputing their uncle's right? Then Bhishma said: I promise never to marry at all so there shall be no sons to me who may dispute their uncle's right. Now do thou let my father have his wish. And because of his fearful promises the Devas cried out with a bodiless voice. He has been known as Deva vrata—o long he shall now be known as Bhishma—the Terrible—terrible surely to himself but most loved and most dear to all true Hindu hearts. King S'amtaru too when he heard that the vows had been already made and could not now be helped took Satya vati to wife but in the fulness of his father's love bestowed on Bhishma the gift of death at his own will alone. Men that prevail over their passions thus and can conserve their manhood perfectly may well prevail against the might of death itself long as they like.<sup>1</sup>

On the other hand it was Duryodhana's stubborn insolence and disobedience to his parents that precipitated the war which destroyed his house. Over and over again his father pleaded with him to yield to the just demands of the Pandavas and give them a share in their ancestral property but Duryodhana scorned his prayers and persisted in his own way. Even when his mother Gamdhari begged him in open sabha to obey his father and to regard his duty he treated her harshly and disrespectfully and so brought on his head the doom of failure. No son can succeed who grieves his father or mother by disobedience or by disrespect.

The Teacher is added to the Father and Mother by the Sanatana dharma as the third great object of reverence and service and we see this virtue also in the ancient heroes who should serve as examples to all Hindu boys. How deep is the love how unflinching the reverence shown by the Pandavas to Bhishma to Drona even when compelled to fight against them. See them bowing at their teachers' feet ere the battle joins on Kuru ksetra and when Dhrishtadyumna seized the white locks of Drona, hear the agonised cry of Arjuna. 'Bring the teacher alive do not slay him' 'He should not be slain' and his heart broken sob when the crime is complete. 'I have sunk into hell overcome with shame.'

The only valid reason for disobedience to the Guru is held to lie in the Sanatana dharma in previous promise or clear duty. Bhishma the example of dharma gives a striking illustration of this in his career. After the death of his father Santanu Bhishma in accordance with his vow placed his younger brother Citrāṅgada on the throne and when Citrāṅgada was slain in battle then he placed the second brother Vicitra-vīrya on the throne of Hastināpura. Looking for suitable wives for Vicitra-vīrya Bhīṣma heard that the three daughters of the King of Kasi were about to hold a Svayamvara and were in all respects worthy of marriage with his brother. He went to Kasi, and by his sole might in battle carried them off from the midst of the assembled candidates for their hands. When he brought them to Hastināpura the younger two, Ambika and Ambalika, willingly consented to marry Vicitra-vīrya but the eldest Ambā, said she wished to marry Salva, King of another country, having chosen him for husband long before. Bhīṣma sent her with all honour to King Salva, but he sent her back saying she had been won in battle from him and he could not take her back as a gift. Then Amba said to Bhīṣma "If Salva will not marry me because you won me from him in battle, then you must marry me yourself." Bhīṣma was greatly distressed for her sake, but in view of his vow of lifelong celibacy could not consent. Then Amba was very angry and went to Bhīṣma's Guru Parasu-rāma, and Parasu-rāma sided with her and ordered Bhīṣma to marry Ambā. But he declined, deeming the keeping of his vow a higher duty than obedience to his teacher in a wrongful order. And ultimately there was a great battle between Parasurama and Bhishma. For many days the single combat lasted and many wounds were received by both and more than once they fainted with fatigue and loss of blood and shock of serious wound but reviving again, they renewed the fight till on the twenty eighth day, the aged Parasurama acknowledged that he could do no more and Bhishma won his cause. Yet because however unwillingly he had brought much sorrow upon Ambā Karna decreed that she should prove the means of his death.

Reverence to the Aged richly closes the list of virtues which should flower when we come into relation with our superiors and it was one of the marked characteristics of the ancient Hindu character. The wisdom which is the fruit of long experience is the precious treasure in possession of the aged and they willingly put this forth for the benefit of the teachable, courteous, respectful youth. In the history of modern life this respect for the aged is apt to be trampled under foot and it is the more necessary that care should be taken to cultivate

CHAPTER IX

VIRTUES AND VICES IN RELATION TO EQUALS

WE have next to consider our relations with the equals that surround us on every side and to know what virtues should be developed what vices avoided, in order to make our home and our outer relations harmonious and happy. Let us first think of those of the home for they are of primary importance pure and happy homes in which family virtues are practised make the foundation of prosperous States of successful nations. We have seen the relations that should exist between parents and children and we must now study those that should be found between husband and wife between brothers and sisters.

The Hindu books are full of stories of the love that should bind a husband and wife together or Conjugal Love. Husband and wife are the same ' says Manu they are one not two love makes the two into one—love protective, sheltering, tender, on the side of the husband love yielding sweet, devoted on the side of the wife. * Let mutual fidelity continue until death * Rāma and Sita form an ideal husband and wife, they enjoy all life's happinesses together, and suffer together all life's sorrows. They take counsel together in all perplexities, and share together all difficulties. We see them first in unclouded bliss, Prince and Princess happy as the day is long when the coronation of Rāma and Sita approaches we see them fasting and praying together when the shock of the sentence of exile comes Sita accepts it carelessly at first, only for her husband's presence, and she would go with him she whose heart is wholly thine knowing not another ever clinging to thee resolute to die if left by thee. Thorns would touch her skin like soft linen, dust would be as sandal powder grass would serve as blanket, roots and leaves as pleasant food so long as she was by her husband's side. * O Rāma, thy company is heaven thy absence hell. Only when he pleads with her to remain behind does her heart fail her. And when he bids her come she tosses fairly to her attendants all her costly robes and priceless jewels stripping herself of all that women live with to be united with him only for the joy is fact that exile could not separate husband and wife. Happy as a girl she is said to be playing in the forest glades unmindful of the lost royal splendour since she is night and day at Rama's side. But though so blithe she yet is wise and we hear her counselling her husband with grave thoughtful words as they wander on the outskirts of the forest of Dandaka. When she is carried away by Ravana the mighty Raksasa how her husband's love breaks forth in protracted search in wild outbursts of lament. Sita Sita he cries in his anguish as he searches for her art thou hiding art thou playing? Oh come. Such sport is my death. While he laments and seeks Sita is exposed to every temptation to be unfaithful to every terror and cruel threat. Devoted to one husband I will never sin against him. With wealth and riches thou canst not tempt me. As the rays of the sun are his own so am I Raghava's alone.

And hear the story of Savitri who won her husband from the grasp of Yama King of Death. King Asva pati of the Madra lands obtained a daughter by long worship of the Devas. They called her Savitri. Fair was she as a figure of gold and sweet as the jessamine flower and the people worshipped her as a Devi come to them for their good deeds. When she came of age her father said to her. "Choose thou a fitting husband for thyself." And she went forth rich with royal retinue. When she returned after the lapse of many months, the Rsi Naradi was staying with her father and in his presence she announced the choice that she had made. King Dyaumat sent of the Salya country, old and blind and driven from his country by his enemies, lives in a forest leading a hermit's life. His son, Satyavat, have I chosen for my spouse. Then Naradi said, "Alas, O king! innocent Savitri hath done all. Is he not fitting mate for Savitri?" the king asked Naradi, "Is he weak in mind or body, wanting in forgiveness or in courage?" Naradi said, "In nothing is he wanting of all this. Strong and radiant as the sun himself is Satyavat, generous like Ranti deva, just like Sibi, magnificent like Yvati, and beautiful like the moon. But all this wealth of virtues must pass away from the earth within a year. His span of life is very short. With sinking heart Savitri heard this. Since war is yet said, 'But once can a person say, I give away.' And I have said it once, 'I give myself away to Satyavat. I cannot choose again.'" Naradi said, "Because thy daughter wavers not, O king, I give thee leave to the marriage," and went away.

Swift messenger went to Dyaumat sent, and he sent back word to Aswapati, "I once myself out of thy favour Yama ! And innocently like a little child she repeated the lessons of dharma that her loving elders and her own gentle soul had taught her By faithful service treading household ways to wisdom have I won and to religious merit Close not these ways O Death depriving me of my gathered fruits Wise and reasonable art thou O Savitri and thy words are sweet Save thy husband's life I give thee any boon His father lives in darkness gracious King by thy favour let his eyes once more behold the day

Fairest of earth's daughters I grant the boon thou seekest And now return O weary earth born feet that may not tread the gloomy path of Death

Where he my husband goes I till must follow Fruitful is righteous company O King of Death and sweet is it to dwell with one like thee Not fruitless may such fair abiding prove Take then a second boon as fruit O peerless lady but ask not for thy husband's soul said Yama Give then O King of mortal worlds his kingdom to my husband's father his kingdom rent from him by evil men He shall regain his throne said Yama and reign thereon And now go back fair dame nor follow further But with sweet words and honeyed praises Savitri still followed the Lord of Death and won from him two other boons one hundred sons for her father and one hundred for king Nala to play him at dice and Nala played and lost again and again till at length he had lost to Puskara his kingdom and all his wealth even his garments and went forth an exile with only one cloth half covering his body. Then Damayanti his wife—having sent her children to her father's care when she saw how the games were going—went forth after him clad also in a single cloth and in the outskirts of the city they wandered hungry and athirst. To complete their misery Nala lost his cloth in the attempt to catch therewith some birds for food and hopeless and desperate he wished Damayanti to be spared the suffering of hunger and repeatedly pointed out to her the road to her former home. But Damayanti clung to him weeping sobbing that she would not leave him that when he was weary she would soothe him for in every sorrow there was no such medicine as a loving and faithful wife. Presently wearied out she lay sleeping on the bare ground and Nala argued with himself that it would be kinder to leave her so that she might seek her relatives than to keep her wandering in misery with him. Thus thinking he cut in half with a sword that was lying near the cloth she wore leaving one half around her and wrapping round himself the other half he fled from her mad with grief. The hopeless Damayanti awaking found herself alone and had deserted and he was called Bahuka charioteer of Rtu parna king in Ayodhya. Returning to Damayanti Parnada the messenger told what had been said and her quick woman's wit devised a way by which to bring Nala to her side. Go to king Rtu parna she said and tell him that Damayanti holds another Swayamvara on the morrow after thy arrival in Ayodhya. For she knew that none save Nala could so drive as to reach her father's palace from Ayodhya within so brief a space. As she planned so it happened. Rtu parna bade Bahuka drive him swiftly to the city of the Vidarbha<sup>1</sup> and Bahuka sore at heart chose swift steeds and drove them as only he could drive reaching the city of the Vidarbhas by that same evening and the<sup>1</sup> by Damayanti's tender wiles he was led to give signs that he was indeed Nala as she suspected for he wept over his children when he saw them and he cooked as only Nala could cook then she bade them bring Bahuka into her presence and husband and true wife recognised each other and long thereafter lived they in wedded bliss their kingdom regained and their children around them.

Moreover a wife who truly loves and serves her husband gains more of inner development and knowledge than she can gain by long austerities

psychic powers, only served my husband single-mindedly. If thou wouldst learn yet more about the virtues of our simple household duties, go to the fowler of distant Mithila. Kausika went with a humbled mind to Mithila, and stood at the fringe of the great crowd of customers around the fowler's shop. The fowler saw Kausika went up to him, and bowing low to the Brahmana said: 'I know why the faithful housewife sent thee to me and shall resolve thy doubts and show thee why I can do so.' Then the fowler took Kausika to his home and showed him his aged parents as we have already seen.<sup>1</sup>

How brothers should show Brotherly Love we read in the whole story of the Ramayana, and it is said that Lakshmana was like Rama's life, so dear and close the bond nor would they sleep apart, nor apart engage in sport, we see him follow Ramacandra into the forest, and stand waking on watch while Rama slept: we see him sharing in the search for Sita: ever wise in counsel and loving in sympathy: and when Lakshmana lies senseless arrow-pierced, before Lanka hear Rama's piteous cry: 'What have I to do with life and what with war, now Lakshmana lies wounded on the field of battle? Why, forsaking me dost thou wander in other worlds? Without thee life and victory nay Sita's self, are worthless.'

crowded round them as they went and beneath their feet the ground was slippery with blood and was strewn with fragments of the corpses of the slain. Sharp thorns and piercing leaves obstructed it and burning sand and iron stones white hot. Astounded the king questioned his celestial guide who told him that he had been bidden to lead him thither but if he were weary he could return. Slowly doubtfully Yudhishtira turned sure that his brothers could not dwell in region so foul and evil but as he turned sad cries arose on every hand and piteous prayers that he would stay a while. Who are you asked the wondering king and answers sobbed from every side. I am Karna. I am Bhima. I am Arjuna. I am Nakula. I am Sahadeva. I am Draupadi. And so with others dearly loved on earth. Go back go back to Svarga cried the king wrought to anger by his brothers' wrong. go back to those who sent you here as guide. Not with them my place but here here where my loved ones dwell. Go thou back to Svarga = barren joy better with these in pain than there in lonely bliss. And as he spake heaven's fragrance breathed around and all was balmy air and shining light and thronging Devas. For stronger than hell is love and fidelity than pain.

was hungry and the wife brought her share and placed it in her husband's hands that he might put it before the guest. Shaking art thou with weakness mother of my son, he said. Keep thou the food and eat lest my home lose its sunshine. But she pressed on him the food that the dharma of hospitality might not be broken and with a sigh he took and gave. Yet still the guest was fain for more and the son brought his meagre share and the Brahmana, aching for his son's hunger and the emaciation of his youthful body, laid that third portion before the guest. But alas even then the guest was still hungry for each little share was as nothing for a hungry man and the young wife's share was now held out to the host's shaking hands but he drew them back with anguish at his heart.

Not yours my little one not yours not yours

Father of my son's father she said with sweet humility of voice and gesture shut me not out from sharing your good deeds. As a Deva is a guest. Feed him then from this my food which is as thine own flesh. Weeping he took and then with gentle smile laid it before his guest who took and ate. Then as the guest rose up bright light shone out and in the midst he stood radiant and splendid for truly was the guest a Deva the Lord of Righteousness Dharma the strong and pure. And in a few grains that he had left uneaten the was too far away from his home and resolved to pass the night under the tree. As he lay under the tree he heard the he pigeon lamenting "Alas! thou hast not yet returned dear wife! What can have happened to thee? If that dear wife of mine, with her bright rose eyes sweet coo, and softest plumes, cometh not back to my nest, my life shall no longer be worth living. The house is not the home, in truth the wife is the home. She eats when I eat, she bathes when I bathe, she rejoices when I rejoice, and sorrows when I sorrow. Yet if I am angry, she always speaks with sweetness only. Life is empty without such a spouse. Without such, a palace is an empty wilderness. Such a one is a trusted companion and beloved associate in all one's acts of virtue, profit and pleasure. The wife is the richest possession of her lord. She is his one unfailing associate in all the concerns of life. She is the best of medicines for all the diseases of the mind. There is no friend like unto the wife, no refuge better than she.

Hearing the lament of her husband the she pigeon caged by the cruel fowler said to herself 'Unlimited is my happiness even in the midst of agony that my husband thinketh thus of me. She is no wife with whom her lord is not content. But we must also think of this poor fowler, overtaken by the cruel storm and kept away from home. He went wondering whether Vidura the calm and strong would pardon his weaker brother's changing moods and become again the pillar of his throne. And going to the forest he found Vidura highly honoured by the princes and by all and approaching him prayed him to return. Then Vidura without hesitating even for a moment rose and took leave of his royal nephews and hastened to his elder brother's presence who prayed for forgiveness for the wrong committed. Gently Vidura spoke. O king I have forgiven. Worthy of highest reverence art thou my elder my superior. Eagerly have I come longing to see thy face. And if I seemed to favour the sons of Pandu it was because a man's heart yearneth over those who are distressed more from emotion than from reason. Dear are thy sons to me as they O king but the sorrows of the latter moved my heart. Thus gently and magnanimously spoke the younger brother forgetting as unimportant the insults he had received.

Urbanity is a virtue very characteristic of the old Hindu life. We see the most exquisite politeness in language and in action as we read how the great ones of the epic poems good and bad alike behaved towards guests and friends and foes. Rama candra is gentle in speech and prefaces his truthful in word and free from malice kind of speech and seeking the benefit of all A Brahmana went to see him and to learn from him, but on arriving at his house found him absent His wife hospitably welcomed the stranger, and after exchanging courteous speech with her he left her and waited patiently on the banks of the river the return of her husband While waiting there he did not eat, and the relatives of the absent Naga approaching him in great trouble of mind, urged that they were bound to show him hospitality 'The whole community young and old is being afflicted, since this thy fast implies that we are negligently leaving unperformed the duties of hospitality Gently replied the Brahmana that by their kindly wishes they had fed him but he could not eat until the Naga chief returned Presently he arrived and in his conversation with his wife we see the duties of the householder, his religion is in doing good to all all who come as guests must be hospitably entertained the householder must be gentle free from wrath and arrogance, must be generous and truthful Thus of old was taught the duty of the citizen to those around him

This fact is beautifully brought out in an ancient story the story of the sorrow of Surabhi when her children suffer In days of yore Surabhi the celestial mother of the race of cows and bulls once stood before the King of the Devas shedding tears Indra asked her eagerly Why dost thou weep auspicious mother of the cows Hath any ill befallen thee Surabhi replied No evil hath befallen this body of mine but I am grieving for my offspring See O King of the worlds that cruel husbandman beating my feeble son that labours at the plough and falls again and again in his weakness The stronger of the pair beareth his burthen easily but the weaker beareth it with difficulty It is for him I grieve with heavy heart and tearful eyes Indra asked in wonder But thousand of thy offspring are thus treated every day And Surabhi replied And for each of those thousands that suffers thus I weep O King and I weep more for the one that is weaker than for the others Then Indra understood the love there is in the mother's heart for her child in suffering and poured down showers on the fields of earth and sent comfort to man and beast alike

Very tenderly is shown the love of Dasa ratha for Rama-candra his perfect son both in his joy over his splendid qualities and his sorrow in his exile

her sons that the time had come for them for which a ksatriya woman bore a son and that even life should be laid down for honour's sake—this Kunti wailed broken hearted and could scarce force herself away from her sons could scarce forbear to follow them as they went forth

Or again note the agony of Arjuna over the death of his heroic son Abhimanyu as he returns to the camp from the field of battle he feels unaccustomed cloud enwrap him and turns to Sri Kṛṣṇa for help for explanation : Eagerly he questions his brothers who fear to answer him and with sad heart feels the piercing anguish of his son's death and surely the youth must have thought as his foes closed in around him My father will rescue me from this fierce storm but his father came not to his help and he fell pierced by a hundred wounds : Not to have been present to protect his child—that was the thought that stung Arjuna to madness for ever the heroic soul longs to protect the weaker much more than when the hero is a father and the weaker is a well loved son

This duty of Protecting the Weak is incarnated in the righteous King and it is the fulfilment of this duty which awakens the loyalty of his subjects

My heart is full of compassion for this poor child of earth. No dog may tread the heavenly fields, said Indra in reply. Immortality and a state like unto my own. O king far stretching fortune high success and all the joys of heaven—these thou hast won to day. Cast off then the dog who hinders thine ascent. Naught cruel is there in the act. earth bound he dwells on earth. O thou of a thousand eyes. O thou of righteous living an Āryan may not commit an act unworthy of an Āryan. I care not for ■ bliss bought by the casting off of one who is to me devoted. Heaven has no place for persons followed by dogs, said Indra sternly. Abandon the dog and come. Time passes swiftly. To abandon the devoted is a sin immeasurable say the wise. As black as the slaying of a Brahmana is this sin of abandoning the weak. O Indra mighty one not for the sake of winning happiness will I cast away this dog. In vain does Indra command or plead. the king remains unmoved. Nor can sophistry confuse his clear vision. he had abandoned his brothers and his wife; why not his dog? says Indra. This is well known in all the worlds that with the dead is neither friendship nor yet quarrel. When my brothers and Krishna fell and died no power was mine to bring them back to life. hence I abandoned them. I did not abandon them so long as they were living. This one right     The king pondered a while and said     Ye both are right ! Thou hast a right O dove that I protect thy innocent life from harm and thou O hawk that I deprive thee not of thy just food But thus shall I resolve this knot of dharma Take thou other food from me O hawk till thou art full ! But the hawk said I must have the dove itself none other or if other then flesh from thine own body O king of the weight of this erv dove     The angry ministers would have slain at once the hawk that menaced thus the priceless life of their beloved master and cried out against the petty thing But king Sibi said I sit here as the sovereign not for small or great not for dove or hawk but as living embodiment of Dharma as example to my people If I fail in the small I shall fail in the great also and my people shall fail grievously imitating me Bring up a pair of scales ! Stricken with a great sorrow powerless to disobey, setting their teeth against the outwelling groans the ministers brought up scales With one gentle hand the king placed the dove into one and with the other strong hand he hewed a piece of flesh from his own limbs But the dove was too heavy And the king hewed off another piece and the dove was much too heavy still And the wondering king hewed off still another piece of flesh from his body But the dove grew ever heavier reserving one portion for himself But as he prepared to eat ■ Sudra came and he gave him gladly a share of that small meal And when the Sudra had gone ere yet he could break his fast a man came with a troop of dogs and the rest of the food save one drink of water Ranti deva gave to these These also went and Ranti deva raised to his parched lips the welcome drink Give water a little water moaned a voice near by and Ranti deva turning saw a miserable form an outcaste lying on the ground turning longing piteous eyes at the water in his hand Bending over him with sweet compassion beaming from his tender eyes Ranti deva gently raised the outcaste's head and put the cool pure water to his panting dust soiled lips

Drink brother he said kindly doubling the value of the gift with his mild graciousness And as the outcaste drank the loving heart of Ranti deva burst into prayer to Hari I do not ask for the eight Siddhis thus he spake I do not ask Nirvana Only I ask that I may pervade all beings suffering for them their miseries that they may live without sorrow By giving this water to save the life of this suffering man my hunger thirst languor distress and giddiness have all passed away And this prayer has ever remained the most perfect expression of compassion as directed. The Rṣi Narayana saw with his illumined eye the purpose of their coming and smiled with confidence. By his Yoga power he produced as many thousands of similarly shaped forms and sent them forth to offer hospitality to Indra's hosts. The latter were ashamed and prayed to the Rṣi to forgive their evil purpose. He was pleased and did so and further offered them a boon. And the boon they asked was that he should be their husband and protector. Great was his perplexity but having said that he would give he could not say no. He repented sadly. This great trouble has arisen out of my aham kara without a doubt. The first cause of the frustration of all dharma is aham kara. Then he said to the maidens. It is against my vow to enter into the household life in this birth. In another birth as Kṛṣṇa which I shall have to take for other work also I shall redeem my promise and bear the fearful weight of this huge household, marrying ye all out of the high families into which you also shall be born.

Viśva mitra son of Gadhi belonging to a line of Kṣattriya kings founded by Kusa who came direct from Brahma returning to his kingdom with his armies after a great tour of conquest passed through the Tapo vana of the Sage Vasistha. Leaving his armies at a distance Viśva mitra went in

Pahlava s Yavana s and Barbara s and they were destroyed by Viśva mitra but finally the Brahmana power of Vasistha overwhelmed the Kṣatriya prowess of Viśva mitra and in vai ragya he gave up his kingdom and practised the severest tapas for ages resolved to obtain the Brahmana power and this he succeeded in doing after long long ages of self denial and peace was made between him and Vas-stha and Vasistha recognised him as a Brahmarshi

To be king of the Deva s is to hold a position that may easily fill the heart with pride and from this cause Indra several times fell from his high estate : Once surrounded by his Deva s he sat on the throne of the three worlds and when Brhas pati teacher of all the Deva s came before him, Indra kept his seat not rising up to receive the great preceptor Then Brhas pati turned and went his ways abandoning the Deva s whom the Asura s then assaulted with success driving them and their king from Svarga This led to many another trouble, and to the slaying of a Brahmana on two several occasions by Indra so that he had to perform much penance ere he became purified

Now, while Indra was performing this long penance the Deva s in order that Svarga might not suffer the evils of anarchy, elected king Nahusa

fell from heaven into a huge serpent's body on this earth and suffered the pains of a high soul confined to a low body for many many ages till released therefrom by the wise words of his descendant Yudhi sthira the King that had no enemy<sup>1</sup>

Now Bali son of Virocana had dwelt long in high prosperity for the Devi Sri or Laksmi abode with him as recompense for his good deeds. But pride in his own righteousness and in the happiness it brought him entered into his heart and he began to think highly of himself and ill of others and wrought evil to them instead of seeking their welfare as before. Then was the Devi displeased with Bali and determined to leave him and to go and dwell with his enemy Indra the Deva King in Svarga. And vainly Bali lamented his folly when he saw the Dev who had long blessed him living with his rival. And this said Utathya to King Mam dhar is the result of malice and pride. Be thou awakened O Mam dhar so that the Devi of prosperity may not in wrath desert thee. The Sruti's declare that Unrighteousness begot a son named Pride on the Devi of Prosperity. This Pride O King led many among the Suras and the Asuras to ruin. Many royal sages have also suffered destruction on his account. Do thou therefore awaken O King

Thus mused Cira karin bewildered by conflicting claims. Again he thought. The husband has his names (Bhartr, Pati) as the supporter and protector of the wife. If he cease to support and protect how shall he remain the husband ? And my mother is to me the object of my highest reverence. Now Gautama, his mind calmed by meditation was overwhelmed with the thought of the sin he had committed in commanding his son to slay his wife and he hastened home weeping blaming his own carelessness for his wife's offence and hoping that his son had not obeyed him. Rescue me he cried, thinking of his son. rescue me and thy mother and the penances I have achieved as also thine own self from grave sins. So it befell that Cira karin by his patience and careful consideration did his father's real will though not his hasty order and thus saved his father from a grievous sin inspired by pride and wrath.<sup>1</sup> letting ourselves run into wrong emotions when these are shown to us. If a man speaks angrily to us and we feel inclined to answer angrily we should check ourselves and answer very gently and this gentle answer will soothe him and make him feel less angry. This is what is meant by returning good for evil and only by acting in this way can we restore harmony when it is disturbed and preserve it for the happiness of all.

When Draupad urged King Yudhishtira to attack the Kuru's after he had been so cruelly cheated and ruined by them the wise king pointed out to her that the returning of evil for evil could only result in the continuance of misery. The wise man who though persecuted suffereth not his wrath to be aroused, joyeth in the other world having passed his persecutor over with indifference. For this reason it has been said that a wise man whether strong or weak, should ever forgive his persecutor even when the latter is in strait. If amongst men there were not some equal to the earth in forgiveness there would be no peace among men but continued strife born of wrath. If the injured were to return their injuries if one chastised by his superior were to chastise his superior in return the consequence would be the destruction of every creature and sin would prevail. If the man who hath ill speeches from another returneth those speeches if the injured man came back to him. Burning with the double sorrow of that sin and of the loss of Rama, trembling, folding hands and bending head, spoke to her: 'Forgive me, O Kausalya. I fold my hands to thee. Ever wast thou tender-hearted even unto others. Bear with thy husband whether he be good or ill. I am so broken already by my sorrow. Speak not harsh words to me even in thy anguish. She heard that piteous speech of the humbled king, and tears of pity rushed forth from her eyes like new-run water from the waterfalls. Her anger vanished, yielding place to deep humility and remorse and fear of sin for those harsh words. She seized the hands of the king and put them on her head and in great agitation said:

Forgive, forgive me, O king, I entreat thee with my head upon thy feet. It is for me to ask thee for forgiveness, not for thee to ask of me for so great a sin would come to me. That woman is not honoured of the wise in this or in the other worlds who compels her husband to propitiate her. I know the dharma and I know that thou, my husband, knowest it and therefore must perform thy promise and maintain the truth. Sorrow for my son drove me in a weak moment to say those words of wrong. Sorrow destroys all firmness, sorrow destroys all wisdom, there is no enemy like to sorrow. It swells within my heart like rivers in of Lakshmana vanished giving place to shame. As the Bharata came and begged and prayed of Rama that he should go back to Ayodhya. But Rama would not break His father's word in letter or spirit. And Bharata carried away the walking sandals of Rama and placed them on the throne as symbol of the rightful Sovereign, and ruled Ayodhya in His name and as his regent, for the fourteen years of Rama's wanderings.<sup>1</sup>

Over and over again in the dark days of their exile, did his wife and brothers, losing heart and patience blame Yudhishthira for his loyal adherence to his compact with the Kauravas and his patient endurance of wrong. Over and over again did that noble heart pierced and tortured by the reproaches of his loved ones win them back by gentleness to the path of truth and honour. Thus Bhima giving way to fierce anger, bitterly upbraided his elder brother with "the trite merit of sticking to a promise" made to gamblers who had overreached him, laid the loss of kingdom and riches at his door reproached him with weakness, with deserting the virtues of his order with making himself ridiculous. But Yudhishthira summoning all his patience and remaining silent for a few moments, answered gently that doubtless all Bhima's words were true. I cannot reproach thee for bestowed on his hated rival, filled with jealousy the heart of Dur yodhana and this evil emotion was rendered bitterer and more active by the careless disregard of his feelings shown by Bhīma and by others. For one day as Yudhi sthira was sitting on his golden throne surrounded by his brothers, by many courtiers and kings Dur yodhana and his brothers entered the assembly hall and as he came he was deceived by the art of Maya the Danava, who had built Yudhi sthira's palace with skill and craft, and taking the crystal lake as water he drew up his garments to avoid wetting them and later fell into water which looked like solid ground. Then Bhīma laughed out boisterously and rudely, and others followed his bad example although Yudhi sthira reproved their lack of courtesy. And Dur yodhana, with black frown went away ashamed, with rage in his heart and returned to Hastinā pura, vowing vengeance for the insult, and this was one of the many causes that led at last to the gambling match and the exile, and the fierce battle of Kuru ksetra, and the slaughter of Dur yodhana and of his and Yudhi sthira's kinsmen<sup>1</sup>.

Evil returned with evil does but give birth to new evil, thus lengthening the chain of misery. Bhrgu had a son, Jamad agni, who became famous for his

by the recital, and so losing self control in passion he rushed off and slew Arjuna cutting off his thousand arms after fierce fight. This act aroused in turn fierce wrath of the kinsmen of Arjuna and to return evil with evil they rushed to the hermitage of Jamadagni where he sat engaged in meditation and slew him with arrows defenceless as he was sitting immersed in contemplation. Nor yet was the tale of slaughter completed since forgiveness—the only thing that could cut the chain of evil—was not in the heart of Ravana of the Vre and he, having bewailed his father and having burned his body with due rites vowed by that funeral pyre the slaughter of the ksatriya caste—for thus the evil grew ever swelling to larger and larger proportions. Then taking up his axe he attacked and slew the kinsmen of Arjuna and after that warred with all ksatriyas exterminating well nigh that warrior caste<sup>1</sup>.

Even when we are treated with injustice and unkindness it is best to preserve sweetness and agreeableness of behaviour and thus win the one who so treats us be he superior equal or inferior, to show sweetness and agreeableness in return. Once Durvasas visited Duryodhana and proved to be a very difficult guest to please. In vain did Duryodhana and his brothers treat him with the greatest joy by seeing the misery of his rivals he took with him his brothers and friends and the royal ladies that the Pandava s might suffer shame under the contrast. His cruel plot failed in consequence of his being attacked and captured by the king of the Gandharva s and his host whom he had insulted in his overbearing pride. Some of the fugitives ran to king Yudhi sth ra and prayed his aid the gentle king rebuking Bhima for his cutting words of refusal bade his brothers arm themselves and rescue their kinsmen remembering that by the seizure of Dur yodhana and the ladies of their house the family honour was stained. Entreated for help in such words as Oh hasten to my aid who ■ there that is not high souled enough to assist even his foe beholding him seeking shelter with joined hands. The bestowal of a boon sovereignty and the birth of a son are sources of great joy. But O sons of Pandu the liberation of a foe from distress is equal to all the three put together. So spake the high souled king and his brothers obeyed. The battle raged for some time and then Arjuna and the king of the Gandharva s who were friends checked the struggle and Arjuna enquired into the reason of the attack on Dur yodhana. The celestial king explained that he knew Dur yodhana s wicked motive in visiting the forest and he was carrying him for punishment to Indra. Arjuna prayed his look or gesture. Such repression gradually extinguishes the feeling, and at least we have succeeded in not casting fuel on the flame to increase its burning. After some practice of this kind, we shall find that the anger of another no longer causes any feeling of anger in ourselves, and we shall be able to use all our strength in sending kind feeling to meet the harsh feeling of the other.

It is now easy for us to see why bad company should be avoided. If we are with people who are thinking unkind, or unclean or other evil thoughts, or who are doing wrong actions—impure, intemperate, gluttonous acts—their feelings will work on us, and will push us towards thinking and acting in a similar way. Any evils of such kind as may be hidden in ourselves will start into more active life under such influences, and will become stronger and more difficult to fight against. For these reasons a boy who wishes to lead a pure and industrious life at school, preparing himself for a noble and useful manhood, should avoid bad company as much as he possibly can. And if at any time he is forced into it, so that he cannot escape, he should keep his mind very busy with pure and high thoughts, and thus try to affect those round him, and to influence them for good, instead of allowing himself to be influenced by them for evil. In this way we may turn our knowledge to good use,
